$500,000 FIRE IN WEYMOUTH

HALF-MILLION-DOLLAR BLAZE—Spectators, at a safe distance, watch the roaring inferno of the Weymouth Art Leather Co. plant . . . which was destroyed today after explosions fired tanks of highly inflammable solvents.

Hint Sabotage as Blasts Wreck Factory, Peril 75

Explosive forces, harnessed by science for the manufacture of synthetic products, lashed out this morning in a series of blasts which completely destroyed the plant of the Weymouth Art Leather Company in a $500,000 general alarm fire.

Hints of sabotage brought an immediate investigation by the U. S. Army, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The company, it was reported, had been manufacturing materials used in the fashioning of gas masks and exporting them to France and England.

Blast after blast roared through the neighborhood of the plant in East street, Weymouth Heights, as one storage building after another exploded and burst into flames.

A smoke pall hung over the locality for miles.

Firemen fought desperately to save homes near the plant, and hardly a tree for hundreds of yards around was left without scars.

About three hundred persons were thrown out of work by the blast and fire.

Four South Shore trains were held up during the height of the blaze, causing delay and inconvenience to hundreds.

Hundreds of passengers piled out to watch the conflagration and had to scurry back into the cars when warning whistles let them know the engineers had determined to run the fiery gauntlet, 50 feet away.

Seven buildings were destroyed—the main structure and a new one, attached to it, which housed $60,000

CALLAHAN SCORES IN OUSTER

State Public Works Commissioner William F. Callahan secred heavily and repeatedly today on the second day of the public hearing through which Governor Saltonstall seeks to oust him.

Yesterday, in opening the hearing, the governor charged Callahan had squandered public money in letting high rate contracts for removal of stumps from hurricane-felled trees.

Witnesses were put on who said the state emergency contract prices ranging from $25 to $100 a tree were excessive.

DECLARES PRICES LOW

Today, at the same witness table, Wilfred Wheeler, Jr., of Belmont, associated with F. A. Bartlett Tree Expert Company, said the state prices were comparatively low, particularly in the hurricane emergency.

For removing one tree stump at Concord, said Wheeler, his firm had received $222. The tree was of 32-inch diameter.

For removing tree stumps in Governor Saltonstall's own Chestnut Hill district, the witness declared, the company received $148 for one stump and $24 for another. Both were elms.

And for a stump removal in Cambridge the company received $161, this being a 28-inch snag.

All these, said expert Wheeler, were private contracts, but he agreed the company had a total state contract of $162,838 for tree stump removal.

Wheeler testified that four days after the hurricane, at the request of the Public Works Department, he had quoted a figure of $35.50 "as a fair average cost" for removing the felled timber and wrote at the same time that he felt a great number of larger trees would cost much more.

F. C. Pray, chairman of the Amherst selectmen, testified his town had paid $25 each for removal of

NEUTRALITY OVER TO NEXT SESSION

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 11 (INS)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today—12 to 11—to postpone consideration of a new national neutrality policy until the next session of Congress convenes in January.

The action constituted a major defeat for administration forces supporting President Roosevelt's demands for action now, principally on the proposal to lift the mandatory embargo on shipment of U. S. arms to warring nations.

Administration-sponsored neutrality legislation would put into effect the President's plan to use all methods "short of war" to stop Europe's dictators and provide economic aid for the democracies abroad.

With the committee's action, the administration has one more legislative card to move on the floor of the Senate that the committee be discharged from consideration of neutrality legislation. If successful, this would bring the issue to immediate debate.

HOW THEY VOTED

Senators voting to postpone consideration of neutrality legislation were Vandenberg (R.) of Mich.; Borah (R.) of Idaho; LaFollette (F.) of Wisconsin; Gillette (D.) of Iowa; Clark (D.) of Missouri; White (R.) of Maine; Shipstead (F.L.) of Minnesota; Capper (R.) of Kansas; Johnson (R.) of California; George (D.) of Georgia; Van Nuys (D.) of Indiana, and Reynolds (D.) of North Carolina.

Voting against postponement were Gaffey, Penn.; Tittman, chairman, Nev.; Harrison, Miss.; Green, R. I.; Wagner, N. Y.; Connally, Tex.; Thomas, Utah; Murray, Mont.; Pepper, Fla.; Schwellenbach, Wash., and Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, all Democrats.

Senators George and Gillette—both were on President Roosevelt's "purge" list in the 1938 elections—deserted the administration on the showdown. They were undecided until the last as to how they would vote, and thus held the balance of power in the committee.

F. D. SUPPORTERS BOLT

Other Democrats who bolted the administration were some of the most ardent critics of its foreign policies, such as Clark of Missouri, often discussed as a presidential possibility in 1940; Van Nuys of Indiana, Reynolds of North Carolina.

Senator LaFollette's vote against the New Deal also was an exception. He is generally a Roosevelt supporter.

Immediately after the committee broke up, Chairman Pittman said in response to a direct questions:

"I should say that this is the end of neutrality legislation for this session of Congress.

"I think that when an important committee like this, after months of consideration, votes 12 to 11 against action, that it will probably mean that a cross-section of the Senate feels the same way."

Women Ball Fans Tore His Pants; Sues Dodgers

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—Ladies' Day at the ball park left a Brooklyn fan scoured and disgruntled today and demanding $10 he paid for his ticket in a suit against the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball Club.

"Dames . . . dames . . . nothing but dames," said Julius S. Trieb, explaining his court action.

"They trampled me. They stepped on my suit and tore my pants. They pushed my face down. I never saw so many women in all my life."

Trieb, a lawyer, said his experience had chilled him on ladies' ball games. They were 15,000 women there last Friday.

"They ought to stay home," Trieb said, firmly.

ACTRESS RITA JOHNSON

Link Film Romance To Downs Handicap

Lin Howard, wealthy West Coast turfman, whistled gaily today following a record-shattering workout of his good horse Ligaroti, Massachusetts Handicap candidate—but gossips in Hollywood had another interpretation.

They whispered that most of his gaiety centers about a romance with beautiful Rita Johnson, Worcester's gift to the films.

Lin Howard

On the West Coast, it was reported that Rita was speeding East by air to see Howard's South American racer go postwards in tomorrow's $50,000 handicap.

Over at Suffolk Downs stables today, Howard only smiled when asked concerning a reported engagement with the screen star.

"I understand that Rita's picture work would prevent her coming here," he said.

"Yes, we're friends but I won't affirm or deny anything further. I'll be most happy if she has been able to fly here for the race at the last minute."

Clings to Chain as He Foils Death Under Tube Train

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—A dangling chain and a pair of strong arms saved Subway Conductor Anthony Stile, 36, from death when he fell from a platform between two cars of a speeding express subway train.

Stile was thrown from the platform as the train rounded a curve. He grabbed the chain with both hands and held on, bouncing along the track with giant leaps to keep from being sucked under the wheels.

As his grasp weakened, William J. McGowan, an assistant train dispatcher who had tried futilely to drag him to safety, jerked an emergency cord that stopped the train.

Stile escaped with abrasions and shock.

Mansion in Newport For Father Divine

Copyright, 1939, by New England Newspaper Publishing Company

NEWPORT, R. I., July 11—Wealthy, philanthropic, convention-flouting Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman gave "first families" of New England's swankiest society colony here an acute attack of jitters today when she threatened to sell her palatial home in fashionable Greenough place to Father Divine, Negro cult leader.

Threatening to sell her palatial Newport home to "Father" Divine, Negro cult leader, Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, socialite, today caused a furor among the elite of the swanky resort. To prove her sincerity, she invited the "Harlem Messiah" to be her house guest.

Just to prove she wasn't bluffing, she announced she had already invited the "Harlem Messiah" and a group of his dusky followers to be her house guests in the immediate future.

Mrs. Kaufman, independent-minded, 43-year-old widow of multimillionaire "Safety Razor King" Joseph Kaufman, made no bones whatever today about divulging the reason for her intended course of action.

DENIED LIQUOR LICENSE

She said a "common crew of Newport politicians and numbskulls" had refused her a license to serve liquor in her present residence, "The Castle," once the home of the late Richard Washburn Child, former U. S. ambassador to Rome.

In order to insure support of her many charities—on which she has sent to date an estimated $300,000—she planned to convert "The Castle" into an elaborate and exclusive dinner and cocktail place, Mrs. Kaufman explained.

$78,000 IMPROVEMENTS

She said she had already made repairs and renovations costing $78,000 and had put up $750 for the liquor license she didn't get.

"I have the highest regard for my neighbors and for most of Newport's real society people," Mrs. Kaufman told the Boston Evening American today.

"But a common crew of politicians and a few numbskulls who haven't had a new idea in half a century have done their best to block all my plans.

"Father Divine is a man of fine ideals and principles. He is doing a great work for his people. I have asked him here as my guest, and I am prepared to sell

SOUGHT FOR 20 YEARS, WOMAN HELD IN THEFT

Wanted for 20 years on a 1919 pickpocket and shoplift warrant, a woman was in the police headquarters lineup—or in two lineups—today and was identified by two of her alleged victims.

But she wasn't a pickpocket at all, the prisoner asserted. She came to Boston only to get a certain brand of jam she used to like and which is obtainable only here.

Police said she found some sort of a jam all right, because she was now held on suspicion of stealing from women's handbags in downtown stores.

IDENTIFIED BY WOMAN

Nora Heinlein of Arlington court, Brighton, was one who identified her in the police lineup and it was on the witness' description given police that the suspect was arrested.

Also making identification was Irene Cradberg of I street, South Boston.

In the matter of the lineups, however, Sergeant Edward Boyle of the detective bureau, who has made virtually a fetish of punctuality, had a pretty bad time of it.

In all his police career he has never been tardy in reporting for duty, and he doesn't like anybody else tardy — so Sergt. Eddie was well burned today when four complacent ladies upset his whole scheme.

FOUR COME LATE

The sarge had presented his prisoner in the lineup and she had been identified. Boyle was due in court and didn't want to be late. The lineup disbanded.

And—just in time to spoil all Boyle's plans—in walked four other women who were supposed to have been present earlier to attempt identifications.

Eager to get to court Boyle quickly agreed with the tardy women that yes, perhaps he could get some more women together for a new lineup later on.

ELY SUGGESTS OATH ON PARDON COST

Recommendation that every parole petitioner submit an affidavit telling what—if any—sums were expended in obtaining a hearing was suggested by ex-Governor Joseph B. Ely at today's session of the legislative inquiry into the so-called pardons and parolee racket.

The former governor, a Democrat, was closeted with the investigators for some time and upon emerging said procedures and methods of pardoning and paroling had been discussed at length.

His appearance followed that of ex-Governor Frank G. Allen who outlined to the commission his pardon policy during his term from 1929-1930.

After appearing for a half hour, Allen told reporters that he had informed the probers that he never had recommended a pardon as governor unless the request was first approved by the State Parole Board and the pardon-parole committee of the Executive Council.

Allen declared he was in favor of an amendment which would curb the pardoning power of future governors.

Executive Councilor Frank A. Brooks of Watertown, also testified before the commission, defending his actions while head of the council pardon committee, and offering suggestions for the improvement of the present pardon system.

Missing Cambridge Man, $3300 Sought

Simultaneous disappearance of $3300 from the lining of an old coat, kept in the attic, and Edward N. McAlary, 30, of Hampshire street, Cambridge, an instructor in a Saugus CCC camp, led to issuance of a larceny warrant today on complaint of David L. Clay, of Hampshire street, McAlary's brother-in-law.

McAlary, according to police, attended the University of Maine for three years and was an instructor in mathematics at the camp. He returned every evening to his wife, Mary, and their son, Raymond, five. To help support the household Mrs. McAlary took a job in a laundry.

McAlary drove away in his car last Friday, ostensibly to return to the camp. He didn't arrive there and his wife and family became alarmed.

Search of his room revealed various slips of paper which indicated lost wagers on race horses.

The missing money, Clay told police, belonged to him, and also represented the life savings of his aged mother, Mrs. Mary C. Clay, who lived at the McAlary home.

Police sent his description to race tracks throughout the country.

Legion Surveys Hub for 1940

Two members of the American Legion's convention committee gave Boston the once-over today as guests of Mayor Tobin, preparing a report on hotel and recreational facilities here for the Legion's September convention in Chicago.

The Legion is expected at that time to take formal action naming Boston as its 1940 convention city.

The committeemen are James P. Ringley of Chicago, and Vincent P. Carroll of Philadelphia. After being greeted at City Hall by the mayor, they met at the Hotel Touraine with representatives of the Hotel Men's Association. Tonight they will attend the Turf Writers' banquet at the Copley-Plaza as guests of the mayor.

Dr. Forbes Safe In Far North Hop

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 11 (INS)—Dr. Alexander Forbes of Boston, who has been participating in scientific investigations in Labrador, was located today at Indian Harbor after having been unreported since he took off in a seaplane from Northwest River on Friday.

Dr. Forbes has been collaborating with a Finnish Labrador survey aboard the S. S. Strathcona, and it was believed at first that Professor Veno Tanner, head of the survey, was aboard the plane. However, communications from Indian Harbor said only a pilot was aboard the plane in addition to Dr. Forbes.

Zone Law Kills $1,000,000 Plan

Plans of a private $1,000,000 housing project in West Roxbury were sent glimmering today when the Boston Board of Zoning Adjustment rejected the petition of the Massachusetts Economics Homes Corporation to change the zoning laws for the district.

The board declared the corporation had not advanced sufficient cause for it to act on existing zoning ordinances.

The corporation had sought permission to build 85 buildings in Veterans of Foreign Wars parkway, West Roxbury. The buildings were to house from three to 20 families each and were to be 40 feet tall.

Zoning laws allow construction of only single and two-family homes of not more than 35 feet in heighth.

DROP BARBERS' BILL

After hearing a charge that approval of a bill to boost annual barber license fees from $2 to $3 would mean the increase would "come out of the customer," the House rejected the measure.

MISSING MRS. PARSONS' BODY FOUND IN N. Y.?

BAY SHORE, N. Y., July 11 (AP)—Finding of the badly decomposed remains of a woman's body on the shore of Fire Island caused Suffolk police to speculate today on the possibility the torso might be the remains of Mrs. Alice Parsons, missing since 1937.

Coroner Grover Silliman said there was not enough left of the body to make positive identification, but that he believed the remains were those of a white woman about five feet seven inches tall.

Mrs. Parsons disappeared from her Stony Brook home in June, 1937.

Her husband, William, and her Russian housekeeper, Mrs. Anna Kuppreanova, now are residing in California.

Many Ransom Notes Received by Parsons

The disappearance of Mrs. Alice Parsons from her Stony Brook, L. I., home remains one of the unsolved "kidnap mysteries" still perplexing police and G-men.

Following her disappearance came a series of kidnap notes, demanding ransom. William Parsons, her husband, went to many rendezvous to meet the supposed kidnapers, but always without success. Once, after weeks of investigation, G-men withdrew from the case, only to re-enter it when again it appeared Mrs Parsons had been kidnaped.

Probe 'Bad Boy's' Jail-Break Killing

ADAMS, July 11—An autopsy was scheduled by county officials today on the body of Earl Burrows, 25, "Bad Boy of Pittsfield," whose 12 hours of costly freedom from Berkshire County jail ended in death, with a police bullet in his head.

Dr. J. W. Bunc of North Adams, county medical examiner; Dist. Atty. Thomas F. Moriarty of Springfield, Lieut. John Horgan of the state police, Sheriff J. Bruce McIntyre of Pittsfield and Asst. Dist. Atty. Harold R. Goewey began an investigation of the youth's death.

Burrows was shot as he and Joseph Martin, 32, of North Tarrytown, N. Y., fled into dense woods near Mount Greylock on the Adams-Cheshire line with Patrolmen Raymond Elchorn and Orlis Fillion in close pursuit. The officers had shouted:

"Surrender! We have you covered!"

Each officer fired once when the convicts broke into a run. Martin gave himself up immediately when Burrows fell. Later, Associate Medical Examiner Arthur W. Burkell said death was instantaneous and District Attorney Moriarty indicated the bullet which killed Burrows was apparently from Elchorn's gun.

As they probed the escape of the two men and Burrows' death, officials conferred today regarding charges which may be brought against Martin for his part in the break.

Auto Accident Causes Funeral Postponement

An automobile accident in Roslindale in which three persons were injured today caused postponement of a funeral in Rowley, in response to a request to broadcast over police radio facilities.

On their way to the funeral of Mrs. Laura Lindstrom, 61, of Tewksbury, Henry E. Lindstrom of Elm att., North Attleboro, his sister, Mrs. Madeleine Outhouse of Plainville, two nieces, Laura and Priscilla Outhouse, Mrs. Outhouse's husband, Edwin, and their son, Henry B., 17, were hurt when their car was in collision with a truck driven, according to police, by Arthur Lamier of Dexter ave., Watertown.

Edwin and Henry Outhouse were treated at the scene of the accident in Center st., Roslindale, while the others were taken to the Forest Hills Hospital, suffering from contusions and bruises.

At Lindstrom's request, a radio call was put through over the police network for the undertaker in Rowley, asking him to postpone the funeral.

Fisherman, 80, Takes Poison

ROCKPORT, July 11—Alone in his lobster shack on Bearskin Neck, William E. Bennett, 80-year-old fisherman of Main street, swallowed five poison tablets today, according to police.

Fellow lobstermen who found him writhing in agony in the shack called the Gloucester police ambulance and the octogenarian was rushed to Addison-Gilbert Hospital, Gloucester.

There his name was placed on the danger list. Physicians said he had little chance for recovery.

After questioning his wife, Mrs. Mary Bennett, and fellow fishermen, police reported that Bennett was discouraged because age infirmities prevented him from active fishing.

Ely Believes F. R. Will Run Again

Ex-Governor Joseph B. Ely hasn't any doubt but that President Roosevelt will seek the nomination for a third term, and that he will be "a hard man to beat," but that "it isn't impossible."

The ex-governor, a Democrat who is out of sympathy with the administration, aired his views at the State House after he went before the state legislative inquiry into the so-called pardons racket.

"I think Roosevelt will seek a third nomination," said the ex-governor, "and I'm against it. I would be against it if it was Washington or Jefferson.

"I believe if he wants it, he'll get it, and he'll be hard to beat, but it won't be impossible. Whoever tries it will have to have all the other votes in one basket. Roosevelt, of course, will get the welfare vote.

"I still believe the Roosevelt policies are unsound—as I have believed since 1933."

James A. Vahey, Engineer, Dies

James A. Vahey, 63, of Hillside road, Watertown, Boston Edison Company distribution engineer and inventor of widely-used "trouble shooting" apparatus, was dead today, following a brief illness.

Entering the employ of the Boston Electric Light Company and later joining the Boston Edison Company staff of engineers when the former company was absorbed Vahey had a record of 45 years of cintinuous service.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mabel Dickinson Vahey; four sons, Rev. Richard E. Vahey, O. P., national director of Dominican Third Order; James A., Jrdr Joseph L. and Phillip E., and three daughters, Sister Mary Ricarda, Sisters of St. Joseph, Boston; Mrs. Francis J. Cadigan and Mrs. William L. Kenney.

ITALY ORDERS FRENCH AND BRITONS TO LEAVE TYROL

ROME, July 11 (AP)—Fifteen French and four British citizens were reported today to have received orders to leave Bolzano province immediately—some by noon—as the Italian government proceeded with forced expulsion of foreigners from its frontier areas adjoining Germany.

Between 25 and 30 other Britons living in more remote mountain villages were expected in some quarters to receive similar instructions as soon as they can be delivered.

Some of several hundred foreigners living in Bolzano province, in the Italian Tyrol, meanyhile, left for their homes in Switzerland, The Netherlands or elsewhere under orders to go. Others were completing their packing.

One Briton affected was understood to be a London journalist who had sent stories from Bolzano describing plans for transporting Germanic residents back to Germany and holding a "nationality plebiscite."

Japs Try British Officer

SHANGHAI, July 11 (AP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, reported today from Peiping that Lieut.-Col. C. R. Spear, military attache to the British embassy at Chungking, was taken before a Japanese military court at Kalgan last Wednesday.

There was no indication as to the outcome of the hearing for Spear, who had been held since May 26 on suspicion of espionage. Japanese said he entered their North China lines without previous arrangements.

A Domei dispatch from Tsingtao said leaders of the Japanese-sponsored Nanking and Peiping regimes had met there for "important conferences" and it was believed that Wang Ching-Wei, former premier of China attended.

Japanese authorities announced last night that a new Chinese political party headed by Wang had been formed in opposition to the Chungking government headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

Those 522 Planes Shot Down—Japs 'Explain' Them

TOKYO, July 11 (INS)—The Japanese government took cognizance today of doubts expressed abroad concerning its claims that 522 Soviet and Outer Mongolian airplanes had been shot down during 71 days of combat, while Japan lost only four planes.

The claims are quite true, a war office spokesman declared, but no photographs are available because the downed craft always fell in Soviet territory.

Soviet and Outer Mongolian fliers, the spokesman said, were "dazzled by the skillful maneuvering" of Japanese aircraft. Many of the Soviet planes were destroyed when they crashed into one another, he declared.

Soviets Drop Germs In Jap Water Supply

AT JAPANESE ARMY HEADQUARTERS NEAR THE MONGOLIAN FRONTIER, July 11 (AP)—Remnants of Soviet-Mongolian forces apparently still held positions on the Manchoukuoan side of the Khalka River today after heavy artillery and aerial activity.

Bombardment by Soviet planes east of here along the Kholsten River was followed by a Japanese statement that the Russian airmen were dropping bacteriological bombs to contaminate the Japanese water supply with dysentery germs.

150 British Planes Roar Off to France

LONDON, July 11 (AP)—Twelve bomber squadrons of the Royal Air Force took off today for a non-stop training flight to southwestern France and return. The force numbered between 150 and 200 planes. A French squadron will reciprocate with a flight over Britain.

Governor Saltonstall was expected today to sign a bill just passed by the legislature, giving the Supreme Judicial Court the right to review evidence as well as law in murder case appeals.

NEW BRITISH HINT STIRS PEACE HOPE

LONDON, July 11 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain's hint of a possible conference table settlement of the Danzig dispute if there were a "clearer atmosphere" broadened today into an international discussion of chances for negotiation.

In his statement to Commons yesterday, Chamberlain defended the status of Danzig—a league-protected free city within the Polish customs administration—as "neither basically unjust or illogical" but "it may be" he added "that, in a clearer atmosphere, possible improvements could be discussed."

Semi-official French sources advanced a suggestion, which they indicated had Polish approval. It was that Germany be permitted to incorporate Danzig technically into the Reich upon guaranteeing that the free city would continue as a demilitarized zone, and that Poland could continue to navigate the Vistula river and use the port as at present.

McNutt Named Security Chief

WASHINGTON, July 11 (AP)—President Roosevelt nominated Paul V. McNutt today to be federal security administrator.

McNutt, who now is American high commissioner to the Philippines, has indicated he will retain his present post for several weeks in order to clear up details.

The nomination, if confirmed, will bring into the administration the Democrat whose candidacy for the presidency in 1940 has been openly advocated by his friends.

ASTROLOGERS TELL HITLER STRIKE SOON

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—Adolf Hitler maintains an advisory staff of five astrologers, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said today, to read the stars and tell him what the future holds.

"At the present time," Dr. Butler said, "the advice of these wise men is that the climax of Hitler's career will come early in September and that whatever he is to do to add to his fame must be done before that date.

"This may sound like nonsense, but it is the sort of nonsense which may easily [veg to modern civilization another terrific [shock."

Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, returned yesterday from London, where he attended a conference of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of which he is also president.

Woman Faces Life Term for 2nd Time

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—Mrs. Ruth St. Clair, who was freed from a life term in prison two years ago, was back in jail today, again facing the possibility of prison for life.

The first woman to be sentenced mandatorily to a life term under the State's fourth-offender law was arrested in a midtown department store for alleged theft of three men's shirts valued at $4.95.

The accusation of shoplifting was the same as that which resulted in her life sentence to prison in 1930 as a fourth offender. The case aroused a controversy then which lasted for years.

Her commutation, as a Christmas gift, by Governor Herbert H. Lehman in 1937 followed an inquiry begun years before by President Roosevelt when he was governor.

A petty offender since she was 14—she now is 39—Mrs. St. Clair never had committed a crime of violence. Her case came into the limelight in 1930 when she pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing baby clothing from a department store.

When the evidence showed she had been convicted three times previously, the late Judge Max S. Levine in general sessions had no alternative under the law but to sentence her for life.

2 Slug Turnkey, Flee Jail; Caught

DOVER, N. H., July 11 (AP)—Two Strafford County Jail prisoners slugged a turnkey and escaped today by leaping 15 feet to the ground from a second-floor window, but were captured a few hours later in underbrush along the Cocheco River not far from the institution.

Jail officials said the men were Charles Burleigh, 32, of Rochester, sentenced to a year for breaking and entering and larceny, and William Moreau, 27, of Dover, awaiting trial in September for violation of the unemployment compensation laws.

Supt. Edgar J. Ham said they pounced on Turnkey Charles Otis, choked him and seized his keys. They surrendered meekly when discovered. Burleigh was suffering from a badly sprained ankle.

Rep. McReynolds Dies in Capital

WASHINGTON, July 11 (INS)—Rep. Sam D. McReynolds, 67, chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, died in his apartment today of a heart attack. He had been in failing health several months.

McReynolds, a Democrat, represented the third Tennessee district and made his home in Chattanooga. He was born on a farm, became a lawyer and served on the bench 20 years before he was elected to Congress in 1922.

Clear Malden Man of Theft

Declared to be a victim of an "honest mistake" John Weiner, 38-year-old Malden house painter, was freed today from Charles street jail where he had been lodged since July 6 awaiting grand jury action on charges that he had broken into and robbed a Washington street jewelry store.

Immediately upon his release, Weiner was taken to the City Hospital for treatment of a chronic ailment he charged had been aggravated by his incarceration.

Weiner's release was ordered by Superior Court Judge Wilford D. Grey when he was informed by Assistant District Attorney William I. Hennessey another man had confessed the crime and a witness who had identified Weiner had repudiated the identification.

ASK VOTE ON WPA WALKOUT

Anxious to decide on a course of action as a result of the nation-wide WPA strike, the State Council of Building Trade Unions today issued an emergency call for delegates from all Massachusetts craft locals to convene in Boston Saturday.

The meeting will be held in Hotel Westminster and is expected to decide whether more than 8000 skilled workers, now employed on WPA projects and faced with a 30 percent wage cut, will quit their jobs.

Already, hoisting engineers who operate power shovels and cranes on the $5,000,000 Huntington avenue subway project are "out" and the strike was augmented yesterday by 150 skilled workers in New Bedford.

Excavation work on the subway was resumed today, however, when Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, Boston WPA head, pressed into service three snow-removal machines borrowed from the city.

Of the "endless belt" type, the machines were found to be easily adaptable to the subway work.

The Massachusetts total of strikers stood at 250, which still is not a "toehold" as compared with the estimated 100,000 on strike in other sections of the country.

While union leaders, desiring to following the orders of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor to fight the new wage and hours system, pondered plans for a strike in the Bay State, many workers were reported returning to their jobs today.

More than 100 were back at work in Lawrence and Lowell. Mayor Dewey Archambault of Lowell declared that strict observance of the new regulations would double costs of operations of projects and might force closing of many.

Air Tests Delay Squalus Raising

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 11 (AP)—Naval officials announced today that first efforts to raise the sunken submarine Squalus, with its cargo of 26 dead, probably would not get under way until Thursday, as mechanism would have to be tested thoroughly before lifting operations began.

Commander John B. Longstaff, aide to commandant of the navy yard, said divers would first check air connections and valves to make certain there was no water seepage in five pontoons already attached to the submersible.

Man May Prove Life On Mars This Month

NEW YORK, July 11—Man has his best chance this month to figure out whether there is life on other planets.

When the planet Mars comes "close" to earth for the first time in 15 years, the astronomers will do again what they have done before, but they will do it with instruments science has developed since the last visit. They will analyze Mars better than ever.

Again they will look at the faint, straight lines, 800 in number, which look like artificial canals.

BETTER INSTRUMENTS

Once more Mars' air will be measured, again its temperatures will be read and again the gray-green areas which may be summer vegetation will be examined.

The scientific improvements which will do these things better include photographic film of a sensitivity undreamed of when Mars was last so close to earth.

They include photo-electric cells to detect rays too weak for instruments of 15 years ago. They number better instruments for reading a star's surface temperatures and new ways of recording the amount of life-giving oxygen and water vapor in Mars' atmosphere.

On July 27 Mars will be 36,000,000 miles away from earth. Usually the average is nearly 50 million miles away, and occasionally 60 millions.

Ex-Soldier Links Bridges and Reds

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11 (AP)—One-day-old records in the deportation trial of Harry Bridges today bore the testimony of a retired National Guard officer that the West Coast CIO director was a "very able member of the Communist party."

Lawrence Milner, one of the Labor Department's key witnesses in Bridges' deportation trial, was called back to the stand today for cross-examination.

Milner, retired major in the Oregon National Guard, at the opening session yesterday testified he had worked as a National Guard undercover agent tracking down subversive activities in the Pacific northwest, and declared he was certain Bridges was a Communist.

Bridges denied he is, or ever was, a member of the party.

Wire communication with Angel Island—where the hearing is being held—was broken today by an anchor from the Japanese freighter Atutasam Maru which snapped telephone and telegraph cables.

The island, an immigration station, is five miles from San Francisco. Both government and telegraph company employes set to work immediately to repair the break.

A proposal to bring the hearing to the mainland was to be acted on tomorrow.

CALLED LABOR CHIEF

"Bridges was their most important man in the labor drive on the West Coast," Milner said after declaring he had seen Bridges pay dues to the Communist party, but refuse a receipt.

Milner said he and Bridges attended meetings of the Communist inner circle together. He said Communist leaders agreed that none of them should talk to Bridges, who might be deportable if known to be an alien Communist.

Examiner James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard Law School, demurred at the introduction of the entire affidavit and the relevancy of some of Milner's testimony, remarking: "This appears to be merely the program of a group of longshoremen. What is the purpose of this testimony?"

HOLDS MATERIAL RELEVANT

Shoemaker replied the material was "all relevant in a broad sense. It all tends to show that Harry Bridges was working for the interest of the Communist party and not in the interest of labor unions."

Bridges' testimony consisted of just four words. He said "I am" in answer to Shoemaker's question whether he was an alien, and "No" to questions whether he was a Communist or ever had been one.

$500,000 WEYMOUTH FIRE LOSS

in laboratory equipment, and five storage buildings.

At the height of the blaze a 3300-volt power line was burned through, falling among the firemen, but none was hurt. Power was shut off and, for a time, North Weymouth and Weymouth Heights were cut off from electricity.

WINDOWS BLOWN IN

Eleven automobiles, owned by employes, were destroyed, and a dozen more were towed to safety. Windows for 300 yards around were shattered.

Herbert Wood, a clerk, with Albert Prada and Harold Hardell were at work when the blast came. They fled just before the building in which they were working burst into flames.

Nitro cellulose — guncotton — is used in the manufacture of the company's products, artificial leather of various sorts, which is really treated cloth. Solvents are used, and huge tanks of gasoline, benzine and naphtha were in various corrugated iron buildings. About 75 night workers were in the plant when, at 7 o'clock, the first blast occurred.

ONE MAN BURNED

All escaped injury except one, the discoverer of the fire, foreman in the "gyro room," who suffered serious degree burns when caught in the wave of flame from the explosion. He is Walter Moe, 28, of 50 Blair road, North Weymouth, and at the Weymouth hospital, where he is in fair condition, he told what happened.

"I heard the puff of the blast behind me," he said. "When I turned, the flames struck me."

Screaming a warning, he dashed from the building as the other workers shrained from their posts and fled to points of safety. From then on there was a series of explosions, each blast sending flame and smoke high into the air.

Fire Chief Thomas G. McCarthy sounded a general alarm at once and asked for help from Hingham, Braintree and Quincy.

Thousands turned out of their homes and all nearby roads were quickly clogged with motorists headed for the fire, or for Boston and work, but caught in the whirling vortex of activity.

SAVE OTHER BUILDINGS

Quickly realizing the futility of fighting the factory fire, firemen concentrated on saving other buildings in the vicinity.

Hose lines were turned on nearby houses and factories.

Fireman Earl Blatchett of Engine Company 3 was overcome by smoke.

Estimates of damage ranged from $500,000 by Arthur Bicknell, the company's manager, to $250,000 by Paul Howard, one of the owners. Fire Chief McCarthy said he believes that "$500,000 is not an unreasonable figure," but would not make an official estimate.

The company had used the factories, now destroyed, since 1914.

The business is owned by George H. Law of Duxbury and Boston and Howard, whose home is in Winchester. George Lindsay of Brockton is said to have owned the buildings, also.

NEWPORT PALACE TO FR. DIVINE

or rent 'The Castle' to him if he wants it.

MAY AUCTION PLACE

"In the event Father Divine does not wish to take my place, I shall put it up at auction—unless some influence is brought to bear so that I can obtain the hotel and restaurant type liquor license for which I applied.

"The mayor and board of aldermen turned down my application, so I appealed to the courts. But I was told yesterday I'd have to wait until October 4 for a supreme court hearing in Providence.

"Even if I get the license then, it will be too late for the season here. And I don't choose to be put off for another year.

"I expect to spend the coming winter in the Mediterranean, so I want to have everything settled before I leave."

WIRE TO DIVINE

Mrs. Kaufman said she had sent Father Divine the following telegram today:

"Reverend Father Divine, Hyde Park, N. Y.—A friend is calling you, as well as a dear friend of Dr. Greer (Dr. Greer is a distinguished Sayville, N. Y., physician, Mrs. Kaufman said.)

"Newport is seething in corruption and politics. I have a castle here. Kindly advise me when you can visit me. I am arranging a gathering fitted for your calling."

The cold shivers Mrs. Kaufman was causing to course up and down aristocratic Newport spines today were not wholly unprecedented.

HER MANY ACTIVITIES

Since her husband died, nine years ago, leaving her independently wealthy, the "Safety Razor King's" widow has devoted herself to many causes not approved by her society neighbors.

One of Mrs. Kaufman's most publicized protegees was Eric Mullicane, Ozark mountain girl waif, who was accused of murdering her fatherless baby.

The Newport widow poured out money and sympathy in the girl defendant's behalf.

Subsequently, she devoted her time and resources to scores of less-known philanthropies.

"I lost my own two children when they were babies," Mrs. Kaufman said today. "So, in recent years, I have given my life to trying to assist worthy young people."

BLUEBLOODS SHUDDER

Willing though they might be to let bygones be bygones, Newport bluebloods were definitely allergic today to Mrs. Kaufman's newest enthusiasm.

They frankly shuddered at the prospect that Father Divine's "angels" might establish a Heaven-in-Greenough palace here like the one provided for them at Krum Elbow on the Hudson River a toss from President Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate.

The Krum Elbow "Heaven" was conveyed to Father Divine by Howland Spencer, its former owner, in an announced gesture of anti-New Deal spite.

SHE FEARS NO "CLIQUE"

When his costly and luxurious yacht, the Maja, was recently halted and searched off the coast of Florida by U. S. customs officials, ex-Squire Spencer was prompt in airing a choleric charge that he was being made a victim of Roosevelt administration "reprisal."

But Mrs. Kaufman while admitting she, too, was moved by rancor against a so-called "political set up" scoffed today at the suggestion that retaliatory measures might be taken against her.

"The little clique here opposed to me has already done its worst," she said. "Now it's my turn to act."

Callahan Wins Points In Fight Over Ouster

stumps alone, $15 for removing trunks and slash.

He added it would have cost more if the town had been unable to obtain WPA labor.

John W. Kernan, superintendent of parks in Lowell, said that city paid $41.79 each for removal of 1200 trees and added this figure did not include overhead costs, such as insurance and supervision.

Early in the session, Callahan had hammered home another decisive point in his favor, his counsel forcing Ralph E. Houghton, veteran state accountant, to admit he has no practical knowledge of the cost of tree and stump removal.

It was Houghton who testified yesterday that Callahan signed contracts for stump removal at prices 63 per cent greater than the "established price."

FIGURES 'ASSUMED'

Today, under vigorous cross-examination by Attorney John L. Murphy, brother-in-law and counsel for the public works head, Houghton agreed that he had no knowledge of conditions behind the contracts.

He did not know, Houghton admitted, if a contractor could remove fallen trees for the same price under hurricane conditions as he could under normal circumstances.

In his previous testimony the state accountant had contrasted a base price of $25 for tree removal set by Callahan after the hurricane with an average price of $10, which prevailed in 1936 and 1937.

Under the new line of questioning the accountant admitted that his figures were based on "no personal information as to probable cost; they were mere assumption."

This assumption was based on the records in his office, and Houghton added that he had "no actual knowledge of proper cost."

Atty. Murphy then brought out that the bids which Houghton had used on which to strike an average of $10 were the lowest bids received and that the average would have been higher if all bids submitted had been considered.

"Isn't it true," Murphy asked the accountant, "that your testimony here has been of no help to His Excellency in arriving at the actual cost in the hurricane tree removal situation?"

LEAVES IT TO GOVERNOR

"His Excellency will have to judge for himself whether or not I have been of any help to him," Houghton replied tersely.

Attorney Charles B. Rugg, counsel for the all-Republican committee which investigated Callahan's department and made charges on which the ouster hearing is based, called Frank E. Colesworthy, purchasing agent for the Crompton and Knowles Loom Company of Worcester.

He testified that some 1200 stumps were removed from the company's hurricane-struck recreation park at an average cost of $8.47 a stump.

Murphy attacked this testimony in cross-examination and drew from the witness an admission that the stumps were those of pine trees, comparatively easy to remove.

Mrs. Rosa G. McKay, Beacon street, Newton Center, secretary to the investigating committee, testified she had sent out 156 letters to various boards of selectmen asking information as to their cost for removing hurricane made tree stumps.

She received 124 replies, she said, but when Attorney Rugg attempted to introduce 16 of the letters Attorney Murphy objected.

After a conference between counsel and Governor Saltonstall, who is presiding, Attorney Rugg withdrew the letters.

The hearing then was recessed temporarily because three witnesses from the western part of the state, called to testify relative to stumping costs there, had failed to appear.

Hub Wool Market Shows Up Trend

The Boston wool market is emerging from a trying seasonal period in excellent condition, according to informed observers . . . The tone of prices has been firm and a fair volume of business transacted . . .

EARLY IN JULY . . . Woolen and worsted textiles mills give themselves over to the job of taking inventory . . . Few as a consequence enter the raw material market . . . And the manner in which prices stand up is quite often a reliable indicator of the trend to be taken in the months ahead . . . During the inventory period this month demand showed unexpected persistence and prices instead of softening showed a definite firming tendency . . . Another bright indication is the fair call by topmakers for wools . . . For several weeks past they did very little buying in Boston and revived interest contains a decided note of cheer.

EXPANSION . . . Continues the watchword of A. & G. J. Caldwell, Inc., of Newburyport . . . Continued increases in business month after month have been reported by the company as necessitating construction of new units . . . The distillers of the famous Caldwell's rum have given a contract for a new bonded warehouse to Cashman Brothers, also of Newburyport . . . It will have a capacity of 3000 barrels . . . And will be the third storage unit constructed since the Caldwell company resumed operations after prohibition . . . Employment for many New England workmen will be furnished by the concern's latest expansion move . . . The six month statement to be mailed stockholders very shortly will show a gross increase of between 30 percent and 40 per cent over 1938, according to officers of the company . . .

MASSACHUSETTS . . . Continued to lead the country in shoe production during May . . . Despite a drop of 7 per cent under the figures of a year previous . . . This is quite an accomplishment when it is considered that the country as a whole showed a gain of 5 per cent . . . The figures just released by the New England Shoe and Leather Association are compiled from Census Bureau reports and also cover the first five months totals . . . And the latter show New England accounting for more than a third of all shoes produced . . . with 61,162,599 pairs, an increase of 4 per cent over the like 1938 months.

IMPORTANCE . . . Of the shoe and leather industry to the Bay State is best realized by a study of employment figures . . . Approximately 37,200 shoe workers were employed in May . . . With the average amount of total weekly payrolls reaching $551,863 . . . In the leather industry the figures were an average of 9200 workers and the average weekly payroll was $232,417 . . . Such statistics tell better than anything else the place shoes and leather occupy in local affairs . . . And explain the zeal with which home markets are defended against invasion by importations from low-wage nations abroad . . .

COMPETITION . . . Has long been credited with many attributes . . . and the ultimate buyer usually profited . . . The Cambridge Electric Light Co. furnishes an ideal example . . . A new rate has been placed in effect which it is believed will enable the company to compete with operators of small Diesel plants . . . Because of a decrease in power costs to a considerable number of commercial and small power customers . . . It is all a part of a general simplification of rates . . .

European Blocs Juggle Sympathies

When our internationalists cease to be Americans and become pro this nation and that, they get into complications.

For example, it takes an acrobat to be consistently pro-Soviet. For the Bolshevik heroes of one season are subject for purging in the next.

Likewise in the current situation, those who are eager to entangle the United States in European affairs find divided counsel in the countries which they favor.

It should not be overlooked that last March the Federation of British Industries, in seeking an economic reapprochement with the (German) Reichsgruppe Industrie, met at Dusseldorf and signed an agreement to "replace destructive competition by constructive co-operation."

If it had not been for the Czech seizure later in March, this pact would have been scheduled for implementation last month.

Meantime, the Federation of British Industries in its last quarterly business review dealt feelingly with German economic difficulties.

Referring to this, the London economist recently pointed out:

"In brief, its view is, quite rightly, that Germany needs foodstuffs and raw materials rather than mere manufactures. And the solution suggested is the formation of larger and 'complementary' economic units in Central and South Eastern Europe. At first glance the proposition is unexceptionable; here as elsewhere in the world, it has been the lack of freer trading that has exacerbated economic difficulties."

Whose game are we Americans to play? Should we tie ourselves to the tail of some foreign kite, or should we seek as a good neighbor to reflect American interests, and in our own book serve as an example to other nations by raising living standards amidst institutions of liberty.

COOL RECEPTION FOR LENDING BILL

By CECIL B. DICKSON

WASHINGTON, July 11 (INS)—Congress today considered President Roosevelt's new $3,460,000,000 lending program with scant enthusiasm despite abandonment by the administration of its original plan to include $500,000,000 for loans to foreign governments to finance American exports.

Opening a drive to put the program through at this session, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Chairman Steagall of the House banking committee introduced identical bills authorizing self liquidating loans totalling $2,660,000,000 in addition to the pending $800,000,000 U. S. housing authority measure.

It included an increase from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 in the authority of the Export Import Bank to lend to American concerns exporting domestic goods abroad.

The original $500,000,000 foreign lending proposal was dropped "on the advice of leaders because of opposition," Steagall disclosed.

President Roosevelt estimated that $870,000,000 of the funds could be used the first year through loans for self-liquidating toll roads, toll bridges, railroad equipment, rural electrification, farm tenants and state and municipal projects, Steagall said.

The bill authorized an increase in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's borrowing power by $2,700,000,000.

This is how the bill provided the money may be used

Self-liquidating super-highway, toll bridges, et cetera, $750,000,000

Loans to states and municipalities for public works, $350,000,000.

RFC purchase of railroad equipment to lease to carriers, $500,000,000.

Rural electrification loans, $160,000,000, in addition to $40,000,000 already available.

Self liquidating farm tenancy loans (to buy farms), $500,000,000 in addition to $100,000,000 appropriated.

Foreign loans through Export-Import Bank, $100,000,000.

Textile Wage Decision Due Next Month

WASHINGTON, July 11 (INS)—Speeding the way for a decision which may wipe out the historic wage differentials between the north and south, testimony at hearings to fix minimum [illegible] for the 650,000 workers in the sprawling textile industry was closed today.

Wage-hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews heard final legal arguments from attorneys representing textile industries and then planned to give them possibly as long as 15 days to file briefs. Final decision may be delayed for a month, or more, since Andrews must study testimony given by more than 100 witnesses in three weeks of hearings in Washington and Atlanta.

The hearings were called after industry committee No. 1 recommended a minimum wage of 32½ cents an hour on an industry-wide basis for textile workers. Under the old NRA, there had been a differential between the north and south, workers in the south getting 32½ cents an hour and workers in the south 30 cents an hour in making its recommendations, however, the committee toward the wage differential principle into discard.

Last witness at the hearing was L. T. Barringer, Memphis, Tenn., cotton merchant. Speaking on behalf of the American cotton manufacturers, Barringer pleaded for a wage differential, setting the wages of Southern workers at 30 cents an hour. Unless wages are kept at that figure, he said, "a lot of manufacturers will throw up the sponge and quit business."

Hollywood Paragraphs -:- By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, July 11—Alice Marble, whom Carole Lombard tried her best to get into the movies, won't have to beg for a chance now. Two film companies are bidding for the new tennis champion and since Alice is as pretty as she is able with the tennis racket, you will see her, I have no doubt, in a story something on the order of Sonja Henie's first ice skating epic.

In fact, Frank Orsatti, her agent, was so excited over the Wimbledon match he wouldn't leave for the Derby at Hollywood Park Saturday until Alice telephoned him she had won from Kay Stammers, the British ace.

One thing neither Frank Capra nor Robert Riskin deny is they'll be together in Frank Capra Productions, incorporating immediately. But neither is saying which company they'll join. I'll be greatly surprised if they don't accept Harry Cohn's offer, for Capra has been with Columbia for 13 years and does as he pleases, having turned out consistently good productions.

Frank finished "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and left for the high Sierras for a fishing jaunt and Bob leaves today for Norway and Sweden for three months, so there'll probably not be any definite announcement until fall.

GLADYS COOPER, PHILIP MERIVALE SCORE AT MARBLEHEAD

'Spring Meeting' Cast Excellent

By PEGGY DOYLE

Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale, touring the strawhat circuit with "Spring Meeting," the pleasant and familiar little Irish comedy that pleased London and Broadway audiences, last night made new conquests in the Marblehead High School Theater.

Miss Cooper is playing the thirtieth Tiny Fox-Collier she played in New York last winter (or 100 or so performances Merivale, her off-stage husband, is playing for the first time Sir Richard Furze, charming but miserly member of the landed gentry who is more interested in his race-horses' past performances than in his daughters' matrimonial futures.

The outstanding comedy roles that of Bijou, the baronet's spinster sister of the voluminous shawls, hotwater bottles and racesheet clippings, and James, the butler who really runs the household—are played by Frances Bavier and Hale Norcross.

Broadway found them, as played by Jean Cadell and James Woodburn, easily the most amusing members of Sir Richard's highly amusing household.

Marblehead's dressy first-nighters were equally responsive to Miss Bavier's gamboleering spinster and Mr. Norcross' omniscient butler. They are as entertaining a twosome as you're apt to find in a New England "strawhat" this summer.

Surprisingly effective is young Julie Grant. She plays Baby Furze, younger of Sir Richard's daughters who is desperately determined to escape the fate of her rather ridiculous Aunt Bijou.

Altogether the co-starring Merivales, a thoroughly well-mated toothgits pair, have cause to congratulate themselves on the good company they're keeping these July nights. Marblehead High School Theater, modern, air-conditioned and comfortable, is as fine a theater as they'll encounter in their summer touring.

IN LOVE AGAIN—ON SCREEN—Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power play the top roles in "Second Fiddle," Twentieth Century-Fox production opening Thursday on the Metropolitan screen.

Crime Thriller On Olympia's Bill

"You Can't Get Away With Murder," Warden E. Lawes' crime thriller, featuring Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page and "Dead End Kid" Billy Halop, and "Fisherman's Wharf," with Bobby Breen and Leo Carrillo, will be the Washington Street Olympia screen attractions, starting tomorrow.

GOVERNOR SALTONSTALL'S proposal of a two-cents-a-pack tax on cigarettes recalls a similar suggestion offered by Governor Curley.

Three years ago, when the Democratic Executive revealed his plans to extract millions from smokers, Republican legislators raised their hands in horror.

Representative Elmer C. Nelson, voicing G. O. P. sentiments, declared that the Republican-dominated Special Committee on Taxation, of which he was a member had "thoroughly investigated the question of taxing tobacco and decided irrevocably against it."

"We have agreed that a levy of this kind falls on those who could least afford it," he said. "I don't believe that we should even consider further taxing a product which now carries a Federal tax of nearly 50 per cent.

"We should not forget that every man who smokes two packages of cigarettes a day already pays to the Federal Government a tax of $10.50 annually. So, if Mr. Curley's program were adopted, the smoker's burden would rise to $57.20.

"If the idea is to raise money easily, why not impose a poll tax of $57.20 on the Commonwealth, and see how far it gets?"

Representative Arthur I. Burgess, Republican taxation authority, shared the Nelson view.

"Taxing cigarettes is objectionable in that it seeks to impose a sales tax on one group of buyers to the extent of 28 per cent in order to increase State revenues $2,500,000," he stated.

Representative Christian A. Herter and other prominent Republicans added their voices to the protest, strongly implying that the cigarette tax was a Democrat Party scheme to make the wager-earners of the State assume the lion's share of the cost of government.

Now, with a REPUBLICAN Governor reviving his Democratic predecessor's cigarette tax idea, thousands ask:

"Will Republicans unblushingly accept the very thing they condemned less than thirty months ago when it bore a Curley label?"

GOOD NEWS comes from the Bureau of Commercial and Industrial Affairs of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Thirteen new manufacturing companies have started operations in the Boston metropolitan area during the past two months, providing jobs for more than three hundred persons.

This brings the total for the year to forty-six new firms, employing a minimum of 1500 men and women.

A fortnight ago the Chicago Tribune enviously observed:

"Plants in the Chicago area counted by the Federal Census Bureau dropped from 9302 in 1935 to 9019 in 1937. Meanwhile, more wide-awake cities were gaining industries. Boston INCREASED ITS COUNT in the same period by 239."

But that is only part of the story. So far this year we have gained six more companies than during the same period last year, and DOUBLE THE NUMBER of jobs have been provided.

TOO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN are handicapped, says Miss Elizabeth M. Osborne, popular instructor at Boston University's summer school.

"Men dislike women with extreme good looks," she explains. "They prefer women with average charm, good health, mystery and a warm and sympathetic nature."

BETTE DAVIS

That is undoubtedly true, as the records of every town and city prove. Less than 10 per cent of the 4231 women whose names appear on marriage licenses issued in Boston this year possess the Hollywood conception of glamour.

But each, without being a Greta Garbo or a Marlene Dietrich, attracted the love of a husband.

In fact even in motion pictures, mere beauty is not considered sufficient for enduring fame. Real stars strive for character and personality.

Bette Davis, the former Newton girl, is an interesting example. Portraying Queen Elizabeth, Britain's foremost ruler, she refused to be photographed as a young, pretty creature a few days ago and insisted on appearing as the plain, red-headed woman that historians tell us the famous monarch was

Human Side of News -:- by EDWIN C. HILL

IN OUR QUITE generally complicated and verbally dressed-up age, invention becomes research. That was supposed to be the exit cue for the garret inventor and it probably was, but the gods of the machine are now declaring him in again, with a pat on the back.

Headed by Dr. Edwin G. Conklin, of the American Philosophical Society, a group of distinguished scientists launches a survey and organization to back up the hayloft experimenters.

Already they find that the amateurs are doing pretty well, with 180 clubs and 32,000 members in the New York region.

THE SCIENTISTS are wise to hail the amateurs. In spite of our vast organization of professional researchers, the amateurs pretty nearly made the modern world of miraculous communications, transportation, power and daily convenience in living.

This assertion is based on the established fact that less than 1000 men pioneered the basic processes of modern technology. And all but a few of them were amateurs in the real sense of the word. The professionals contributed organization and carried forward their gains.

This printed page could tell a pertinent story—and not in type language. It begins with old Bob Vandercook, letting the Evanston, Ill., Press run itself while he monkeyed with his invention. That was many years ago. I have the story from a friend, an old-time newspaperman:

COMMENTATOR EDWIN C. HILL
"The Scientists Are Wise to Hail the Amateurs"

"Everybody liked Bob. He lived in the spacious old family residence in an old fashioned town, worked on his invention all day and at night played the player piano with great virtuosity.

"Bob had settled the editorial problem by building a trough which ran a few feet from his desk through a wall into the composing room. Preachers — Evanston was swarming with churches in those days—brought in their sermons; press agents, reformers and lodges also deposited their copy.

"On Tuesday night, long, lean, leathery old Bob, with a wide swing of his arm, would sweep the week's accumulation into the trough. Thursday was press day, and the old printer was always sober Tuesday and Wednesday."

"Old Bob put in a ten-hour shift in the office, drawing wheels, cams and pinions. His invention was a merry joke around Evanston for twenty years. Years later, I was editing a printing journal in San Francisco. There came through from the East an exciting story about the Vandercook proof press.

"Simultaneously, old Bob was touring out that way with a big red automobile and a $90 suit. He had just bought himself a $1000 player-piano."

Political Parade -:- By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The fear that President Roosevelt may have given certain definite commitments to Great Britain and France fills the minds of some Senators today as they face a new White House drive for the anti-neutrality program.

They see in the President's demand for the enactment of legislation for the repeal of the mandatory arms embargo a motive calculated to lead him to the exercise of the utmost of his power over the State.

If it is true that the President has made promises to the so-called democracies — meaning chiefly the British aristocracy and the French dictatorship—and that in order to make good on these promises he must be given a free hand through arms embargo repeal, the issue between Congress and Executive can lead only to a battle to the bitter end.

THAT IS WHAT the Senate anticipates, but it may be asserted that—except for the yes-men, who would support the President in any demand—the Senate will not feel itself to be under obligation to make good on Mr. Roosevelt's promises to London and Paris.

The President has already shaken his fist at the dictatorships.

THE IMPERIAL CROWN
A Symbol of Democracy?

He did this in his famous Chicago "quarantine" speech.

That speech, in itself, was a sort of promise. If he has gone even farther than this, naturally he will not be satisfied merely to content himself with a little finger-shaking, imposed by Congressional amendments to the anti-neutrality resolution.

Senate opponents of the whole Roosevelt international policy would welcome any move the President might see fit to make to take his fight to the country.

They believe that precisely the result would come of it that came of Woodrow Wilson's appeal to the American people to support the League of Nations.

When Mr. Wilson destroyed his health and suffered a break-down, as a result of his cross-country tour to sell the League to the nation.

The more Wilson talked League the more were the people determined to have none of it.

The more Mr. Roosevelt talks "neutrality" the better will the people come to understand that what he is trying to sell, wrapped up in the glittering tinsel of neutrality, is in reality UN-NEUTRALITY of the most dangerous brand. Once the wrapper is stripped off, the fake inside the cover is disclosed.

SO, it makes very little difference who discusses this policy of so-called "neutrality," the President or the opponents of this New Deal policy.

What is essential is that it should be discussed, and if the President takes the issue to the country, opposition Senators feel that he will inevitably expose the sham and deceit, that he will defeat himself as Woodrow Wilson did.

DR. HARRY L. CROSBY will be paged in vain at Suffolk Downs today by a multitude of adoring patients who sent him back to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel after yesterday's racing program with an acute case of writer's cramp . . . For years, the good doctor's Boston patients have been content to accept his ministrations from a distance, either from over the airwaves where his microphone-side manner of singing has lulled them to forgetfulness of everyday ills, or from a movie screen where he yodeled romantic ditties to the heroine and routed the villain . . . But yesterday, a few thousand-or-so of his admiring patients got a crack at the good doctor in person . . . And they called him Bing as they pushed racing programs and scraps of papers and menus under his aquiline nose with a request for his autograph At first meeting they called him Bing. He likes that

NOT THAT DR. CROSBY complained . . . He is a genuine and affable soul . . . He permitted himself to be ushered here and there, to pose for photographs, to accept Eddie Mack's tips, and to shake hands with a couple of hundred strangers . . . But today will be not as taxing . . . That match-game with Tommy Carr, the golfing pride of Marblehead, is underway at a North Shore course as you read these lines . . . It was to be a twosome in the morning, and the program called for a Carr-Crosby pairing against any or all comers in the afternoon . . . Then, with a day of golf conditioning him for his best effort, the visiting star thought he'd be ready for the Turf-Writers' Ball at the Copley-Plaza tonight . . . Bing wore a fancy silk polo shirt, with colored figures, a yellow leghorn hat with a colored band, and a pipe . . . He had the services of half the trainers on the grounds in making selections on the horses, and managed to beat just one race—the one won by Kenty Miss

ONE LOOK AT MR. CROSBY and old friends could well accept the fact that a Hollywood career calls for rigorous training . . . His face is lean to the point of being drawn . . . Naturally a stocky lad, Bing is trained down to the limit . . . What does he think of the chances of his horse, Ligaroti, in the Big Race tomorrow? . . . To hear him arguing with Johnny Loftus, the Louisiana trainer, a bystander might believe that Bing and his partner, Lin Howard, have conceded the $50,000 race to Pompoon . . . But Trainer Loftus implored Dr. Crosby to ship Ligaroti back to California so that Pompoon might have a chance . . . It may have been an act.

Do You Dare to Live As Adult Person?

By Elsie Robinson

I DON'T KNOW who wrote them, but many a time, when I've been tempted to take the count, these lines kicked me back into the ring [illegible]:

"He who lives more lives than one
"More deaths than one must die

Thirteen short words—but they'd change your whole outlook if you had the courage to face and follow them.

"He who lives more lives than one." Did it ever occur to you that you COULD "live more lives than one?" You've peeved—plenty—about this one life you are living. You resent its drabness, monotony and limitations and look with envious eyes at those who have more colorful careers. If only YOU could have their breaks . . . their chances to develop a many-sided personality by going places, seeing things . . .

BUT THEY DIDN'T DEVELOP THOSE PERSONALITIES . . . THEY BOUGHT THEM. THEY BOUGHT THE CHANCE TO LIVE BY BEING WILLING TO PAY . . . AS YOU TOO CAN BUY THEM, IF YOU WILL

DEATH . . . dreadful word! You think of death as you think of birth, as coming once in a life time. But death comes many times . . . as many times as you have the courage to risk it. BIRTH AND DEATH ARE NOT TWO DIFFERENT THINGS . . . THEY ARE ONE CONTINUOUS PROCESS

'Pete' Richardson Excels as Chef

CLIP THIS OUT and save it in case you hear Weld "Pete" Richardson making wise cracks about American brides cooking out of cans. Pete, who is one of Harvard's most avid candid camera shooters, has developed into quite a can-opener chef himself . . .

We don't want to create the impression that he has forsaken photography for domestic science, but it seems that it fell to his lot to be the cook on a cruise to Maine and Nova Scotia, recently taken by a crew of gentleman wanderers . . .

Members of the crew, including J. Bertram Mitchell, Pete's roommate at Harvard, report that their candid camera chef didn't even attempt bride's biscuits, but fed them out of cans from the time they started to pull in the yacht's hawser till the day they dropped anchor back in Magnolia! . . .

His most popular creation was sardine sandwiches a la Richardson . . . but it's no news that Harvardians are adept at swallowing little fishes . . .

In spite of the seemingly endless row of tin cans which line the ocean's bottom in the yacht's wake, members of the crew look hale and hearty and are willing to try it over again . . . so they are starting a cruise around Long Island this week . . .

A bon voyage can-opener shower is now in order for Pete!

On their furlough between trips the sun tanned cruisers of the rolling ocean stopped in at the Casino in Magnolia the other night to hear Nancy Bertelsen sing and to tell Pat Phelan and Janet Pierce, who were in a party of six, all about their trip . . .

MISS JANE ROWLEY, photographed in the family heirloom bridal gown in which she will be married this evening to Ralph Briggs Snow. The gown was made in Paris in 1875 and first worn by the bride's great-aunt, Catherine Bacon. The costume is completely old fashioned, even to the lace hanky which falls from a gold chain crooked over the little finger, and the tiny ivory prayer book.

North Shore Fair Tomorrow

This seems to be a year for International fairs as well as affairs. Taking a tip from New York and San Francisco, the committee for the Christ Church Fair in Hamilton tomorrow has chosen a Round-the-World theme, with tables and booths, instead of buildings, to represent the various nations.

Several dozen lucky fair-goers will have permanent souvenirs of this gala summer fete, in the beautiful posters of European nations which will be sold at auction. The posters were obtained by Mr. Robert Matthews who is occupying the William deFord Beal house at Beverly Farms this summer.

Madame Julia Brambilla (Julia Meyer) who recently came from Italy to spend the summer with her brother, George Von L. Meyer, has contributed some lovely pieces of Italian leather, and Mrs. Melvin Day, who is now travelling in Mexico, sent home a collection of colorful articles for the Mexican table.

Madame Brambilla's niece, Nancy Meyer, will have charge of the exhibition of models which represent the U. S. A.'s contribution to this modern age of speed.

Elizabeth Stewart is in charge of the doll table and Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree have added several ponies from their stables at Flying Horse Farm to the string of ponies provided by Mrs. George C. Clement and Mrs. James M. Parker 2d, to give rides to the youngsters.

Due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. B. Preston Cutler, chairman, and Mrs. F. W. A. Stride, who has carried on for the Rev. Stride during his recent illness, interest in the fair is more widespread than ever before. Rev. Stride is rector of Christ Church and always takes a very active part in plans for the summer fair.

Finds for Vacation Days

By ANNICE BRINK

PERHAPS you will include in your vacation wardrobe a suave dime grey or wet clay silk jersey. . . particularly if you're going to be in the heart of some smart city for a little while.

A very self-contained number is the classic shirtmaker rayon, with its good-anywhere-on-this-planet lines and detail. It's a "suedetown" fabric which is soft-finished and crease-resistant. And the sports neckline may be worn open or high with your pearls over the collar.

Its watercolor shades are clear and pretty aqua, powder blue or rose stripes on white, and in sizes 12-20 it is but $2.

As for the other frock, it's a gay little minx of light white rayon shantung with bright red buttons, the color repeated on bodice and belt bows. The fullness of this skirt isn't allowed to lag—it's inserted by front pleats in the front, and three gores at the back. Sizes 12-20, $4.

FOR SHOPPING information on these summer play day fashions, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write.

You Can Be Beautiful

Forestall Wrinkles-to-Come

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU MAY think it's a spirit-firmer that you need in these dog days . . . but you actually require, and far more, a face-firmer . . . something refreshing and bracing, to take away that let-down, dull look from your complexion.

It's the midsummer slump that gives even many a young complexion a faint shade of crepiness, a portent of wrinkles-to-come that's no fun to contemplate. Youthful or older, it's time to call in a refreshing complexion bracer that looks like creme de menthe with ice shavings, crisp and frosty, floating in it, iceberg cool!

Actually a deep green liquid, cool to look at and to smell, it is meant to be used twice a day. One teaspoonful to a pint of cold water and as you dash it on your face and throat it has all the feeling and effect of an ice rub, without the danger of breaking the small veins and blood vessels on the surface that goes with ice rubs.

These smoothing-out treatments with ice have acknowledged virtue, except for that one fault. And the bracing lotion does an even finer job of refining the skin texture drawing it to a close, satiny grain, so the loose crepiness and suggestion of fine lines is forced out.

You'll not find its like anywhere else, and in but one Boston shop.

To learn about this unique bracing substitute for an ice rub phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000 week-days until 5:30, or write, in closing a stamped, self addressed envelope.

POOR Young PEOPLE

By MAY EDGINTON
Author of 'FAVORITE WIFE'

THE lawyer began tentatively to reconstruct his new client's future. "If your late mother hadn't any favorite place of residence in this country, Mrs. York, might I suggest and arrange the funeral arrangements for you?"

He lunched with her, enjoying the full, delicate flavor of Punch Vanner's wine.

"I will take all trouble off your shoulders, Mrs. York. I advise you to stay here a little longer.

[illegible] over her, his every look and gesture noticed by the lawyer.

"Mr. Ridd — Mr. Vanner," Day said.

The men shook hands.

Punch turned back to Day. "I just came to see what I could do, and if you feel all right."

"Perfectly all right, Punch," she answered wearily, though it was absurd to pretend that they didn't both know there was more in his frantic dash to her than that.

"You've had my letter?"

"I had it this morning."

The lawyer stepped from the loggia, strolled away to the near horizon, where the lawn's edge seemed to melt into the sea below. He wondered a little what manner of man this absentee husband could be.

"Well?" Punch asked.

"There's no answer to your letter."

"No answer?"

All the same, she gave what amounted to an answer, looking up at him, as she lay still among the cushions, and any man of the world would have recognized it as such. "Listen, Punch. I have eight thousand pounds. I have furniture. Things. For the first time things are of my own that I haven't to borrow or ask people for. Baby and I are rich! I'm going to have a flat; I'm going to write today to dear Lewis Lewiston. And to Mr. Avril. I'm coming back, and, Punch! I will succeed."

So that was it!

He stared down upon her, stirred.

WOMAN'S POVERTY

She begged him hurriedly! "You mustn't be shocked at me, or think me unkind and hard about poor Mother. I have a letter from her here, sweet and pathetic. Oh! her courage to do this awful thing! She meant me to do what I'm going to do. She died just so that I could do it. Wrong and—and—cowardly, people may think of it, if they don't know. But I know, Punch, that she did the most gracious thing she could think of. I'll tell you what she wrote in that letter: Women's poverty is their tragedy. So it is! She knew!"

"She always avoided it herself, up till yesterday, by keeping your share," Punch put in.

"Don't be hard about her any more. Yesterday you didn't like her, did you? You disapproved of her. Well, I know now she didn't expect to be liked or approved of herself. Oh, Punch, it's terrible! But it's my mother who came unexpectedly to rescue me from . . ."

She shuddered. That grim little spectre at Wellington Villa made one shudder. Punch patted her hand.

"Yes. She was brave and quick to decide what she could have done long ago much more simply and rationally. You'll forgive me, Day dear, I mean your mother had a melodramatic way of making amends."

I think mother was always a [illegible] person. You see, Punch, it must have been a shock and surprise to her to find me where I was and how I was. She'd been making up her fairy tales about me all as usual. And then, suddenly, she came and saw.

The baby stirred and began a hungry cry.

"There's baby, Punch."

"Yes, by Jove! Baby. What of him?"

"I'll provide for him, and I'll provide gloriously!"

"So that's it, is it?" he exclaimed.

And in a flash he knew that, deep down, she was angry, humiliated, bitter, furious with her husband. She meant to punish Burne.

"That is it." She got up.

Punch had never been known to lose his common sense.

"Day. Leave the boy down here with a nurse. Rich plutocrat with your forty thousand you could still accept the loss of a country cottage for the autumn!"

"Punch darling!"

"I shant come. It'll be all yours. A friend of Miss Day Flowers begs her to accept use of Windmills for as long as she pleases. To a certain and large extent—I love you."

"I shan't forget. And — to a certain extent—I love you."

"I'm told love can grow," he said. "It came on me like a thunderbolt, but there's another kind which might grow—"

"Love came on me like a thunderbolt, too," she said. "And thunderbolts aren't occasions you easily forget."

The baby roared.

NO NEWS

"I'll go and talk to that fellow," said Punch, striding off across the lawn to the lawyer, who strolled about.

They decided such things as they could, subject to Day's pleasure.

But when she came out to them again, she had made more decisions than they had.

Punch drove the lawyer back to town, still exhorting him to lift all possible trouble from the shoulders of Miss Day Flowers, whose public life, he said, must soon claim her again to an extent which really should exclude private petty cares.

But after he had dropped his passenger, with a little laugh and sneer at himself he went on an impulse, to Christobel's flat. The lovely flat of stream lines and white hide furniture and cocktail bar, and Matisse pictures—just one or two, brilliant on white walls. He had been there before, in the past few months, to ask: "If there any definite news of Miss Ellies yet?"

But there wasn't any news of her, brilliant, incorrigible, cruel Christobel who believed that she could do exactly as she wished always.

She wasn't a girl to allow the private, petty cares which a Day Flowers might hoist on her little shoulders. She had instructed her lawyers to pay her rent and her servants until further orders, and left it at that.

"If only I knew how much she's done of what she set out to do!" Punch groaned to himself, thinking of Burne York.

Big decisions!

Laura in her small wisdom knew what money could do for a penniless woman, and had done it thoroughly. And the last ceremonies were over. It was all over. There was no more Laura Flowers. The convention of memories and regrets must not be allowed to hamper one's path. No reason existed for any delay in what, in sensitive moments, Day told herself was her most ruthless program.

She repressed these sensitive moments. Useless, foolish, for a woman to be soft! That way comes tragedy. Look soft, and speak softly—but keep bright, underneath the irresistible steel! The day after Punch and Ridd the lawyer, left, she wrote to Lewis Lewiston who drove down to see her and spent a long day with her, a contract in his pocket which, before he left, she signed.

"I believed in you from the first," he said. "I believe in you now more than ever."

Glancing about him he added: "At last—and you haven't been too long—you've seen the light. A girl of your calibre mustn't waste herself."

So—more ruthlessness! She must wean the baby, persuade him to bottle feeding; but a cheerful trained nurse and a comfortable doctor helped her to this without too much suffering to body or soul, either for her own or for young Burne. "You've given him a good start," the doctor comforted her, so drying the tears in her eyes.

NO REPLY

Besides, it did not so desperately matter, now that this proceeding did not mean leaving him in Wellington Villa; now that her weekends could be his; set in the loveliness by the sea.

Punch's servants came on her pay roll. She insisted on that. On the other hand, Punch insisted on lending the "Windmills" car. "Must garage it somewhere. Surely you can't refuse to garage a car for me, woman!"

Adorable "Windmills," fresh on September mornings; October mornings; in November; perfumed with the day-long scent of flowers in dusky evenings.

This is living, Day thought.

And the humbleness vanished I'm going to live, she thought.

Though, when she was alone at nights, she could think of other living—living—living.

Punch had advice to offer: "Ask Burne's firm to send you all the news they get of him."

It was done; and courteously they would telephone her when they had anything to report. It didn't happen often.

"You can still write to him," Punch said. "Meanwhile, girl, dance, skate eat, drink, laugh, and I wish you'd love a little!"

"No answer," she teased him.

And she did laugh, she did dance and skate, and love very much—her baby.

Life and strength rushed back into her.

It was a [illegible] experience, this collaboration of Nature herself in restoring to a woman all her former strength and [illegible] across and more.

She needed it, that [illegible] There was the flat to be [illegible] Laura's furniture, brought from storage, looked almost new—so little used had it been. It wasn't comparable with Christobel's streamlined, costly things but it had its simple grace and had been well chosen. Linen, china, silver—there was enough. In high spirits, Miss Day Flowers, who only became Mrs. Burne York when she rushed down to "Windmills" for long week-ends to see her son, bought radiant chintzes, those paint, equipped that pretty flat in Westminster.

Miss Day Flowers bought clothes, and for the first time in her life bath salts, subtle cosmetics.

And only a year ago—less than a year ago—I didn't care about any of it! I didn't know! All I cared for was Burne, and what he'd say, do, think!

Why is there no word from Burne? Has he decided to leave his wife for Christobel? Don't miss this tomorrow.

Love And Marriage Truth Best

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am not yet of age, but have seen a good deal of life since I was 15 years old. My stepfather sent me out to work, and I didn't know how to take care of myself. After some pretty dreadful experiences, and becoming hard-boiled, I became self protective.

About six months ago, I met a man, different from all the others. He wasn't selfish, did not try to exploit me, was considerate and respectful. When he asked me to marry him, I thought the only decent and square thing to do was to tell him the kind of life I had led, after my stepfather put me out.

He seemed to feel so sorry for the poor little waif I had been, kicked from pillar to post with no means of self-protection, and his applauded the fight I made to get an education and the fact that I hold a responsible job.

We are still good friends, and yet something has crept into our relationship. It is not as it was before I made my confession, and I am wondering if I did the wise thing in telling him the truth. I care so much for him I could not bear the thought deception. M.

You're not only courageous . d square, but you did the right thing. Leaving out of the question ideals of truth and loyalty, and coming down to a practical plane, it is probable this man might have heard something of your earlier life from other sources.

From what you tell me of him I believe he canno. think any less of you for being truti ful.

Delay Hearing On Blue Sky Bill

Governor Saltonstall's bill to abolish the state division regulating the sale of securities, headed by John H Backus, encountered delay today when the Senate Ways and Means Committee held the measure up for public hearing next Monday.

In view of the drive for final adjournment of the Legislature within two weeks, the committee's action came as a surprise and caused some speculation as to the significance of the move.

The committee also announced that a bill calling for abolition of the state stocks inspection division - another part of the Governor's economy reorganization program—would be given public hearing on Monday.

Torso Killer Found Sane

CLEVELAND, July 11 (AP)—Frank Dolezal, confessed slayer of one of Cleveland's 12 "torso murder" victims, was declared sane by psychiatrists who will testify at examination today.

Dolezal, 42, a former truck driver and laborer, was examined by Drs. S. C. Lawrence and K. S. West.

Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell said he would be arraigned before Probate Judge Samuel H. Silbert on Thursday and that the case probably would be presented to the grand jury July 17.

Dolezal is charged with the slaying of Florence Polillo, 27, whose body was found in a vacant lot on Kingsbury Run, a desolate ravine in the heart of Cleveland's industrial district.

Burglars Loot Chelsea Baby's Bank of $8

Burglars who robbed a baby's bank of $8 were sought by Chelsea police today.

Mrs. Alice Tremblay, 28, of Clinton street, Chelsea, told police she returned home from a vacation to find that a cellar window had been forced and the house ransacked. All that was missing she reported was the contents of the baby's bank.

Beauty hints by Arline Gould, every day in the Boston American.

Find 'Drowned' Boy in Bed

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 11 (AP)—After grappling for six hours in the Seekonk River today for a boy they believed had jumped off Washington bridge after he was caught driving a stolen car, police found the "body" — a 15 year-old youth — fast asleep at his home.

The boy, Peter Gregelevich, told police he fled down a bridge stairway when they thought he jumped, came back and watched the search for a while and then went home to bed.

Burglar Enters Convent, Tries to Choke Nun

CHESTER, Pa., July 11 (AP)—An intruder broke into St. Michael's convent today and attempted to choke Mother Superior Theresa Vincent while she and ten other nuns were asleep.

She reported to police the man threatened to shoot her, but that her screams drove him away. He entered by removing a screen from a first floor window.

A taxi driver, whose attention was drawn by the screams, said he saw the man fleeing, but police found no trace of the fugitive.

AUSTEN LAKE

Credit to Cronin Where Credit Is Due

INASMUCH AS I AM ONE WHO SKEWERED Joe Cronin in the past for his unnatural willingness to hog all the worry for his Red Sox instead of worrying less and making them worry more, I am now caught in the backfire of my own logic. For, if Joe was censorable for the failure of his teams when the athletes came to Boston, fully endorsed as the stuff from which pennants were made, doesn't it naturally follow that he should receive credit for hoisting the same "dull, dumb, disappointments"—the quoted words are culled from my former writings—to a new altitude, just under the eves of the pennant roof?

AUSTEN LAKE

So, I am hauling off and sassing myself back, now that the same players who could not hit rival pitching and the same pitchers who could not prevent rival players from hitting them have miraculously recovered.

If what I criticized as Joe's "negative quiescence" was poison then, it must be that his same "negative quiescence" is a tonic now.

Matters have always gone by contraries with these Red Sox. There was the Springtime of 1934 when Joe was trumpeting his premature pennant claims from the Southland and boasting that his was the team to beat. Well he was right! The other teams beat him and he wound up in sixth place.

Then again last April he had sat pretty subdued with little puckers between his eyes and mentioned timid hopes that he might rise as high as the first division. He said his catching was inadequate, though the little word ending in 'ousy seemed more descriptive. His pitching was pretty freckled. His older men were growing older and adding another layer of disillusionment. And though he didn't say it out loud, because he was whispering, most of his opinions then, it was clear that he thought he had as much chance as a feather in a high wind.

So he guessed right again; For though he may not be going anywhere in the race except toward October, he is going higher, wider and handsomer than since Tom Yawkey unscrewed his fountain pen and wrote a check for $250,000 and called him to manage a $4,000,000 property.

Good Luck Mixed With Bad

UNQUESTIONABLY THERE ARE QUIET evenings now when Joe looks backward through the months to last April and finds many ways that the dice might have rolled him to the top of the league. He wouldn't be a true baseball manager if he didn't.

He thinks about the sore arm and sour stomach which hampered Jack Wilson last May, Jim Bagby's curdled chemistry in May and June, Jimmy Foxx's sinus, etc. So Joe's wake is cluttered with troubles, what with doing a nice job at shortstop and at bat and thinking for 25 other fellows. Though, possible, his worries are no greater now than they were in the years when he was acting like a soothing spouse toward a hysterical harem of helpmeets, including Roy Johnson, Wesley Ferrell, Willie Werber and Buck Newsom, all and any of whom were enough to gray any manager's hair.

Still Joe's summer has not been all sorrow. Jimmy Foxx, after wearing out three years of Boston patience, is enjoying a personal revival and once more justifying the $20,000 which Tom Yawkey paid him all through his dull period. Also Lefty Grove, after being despaired of last fall, has won eight games to two losses. And young Bobby Doerr, Woody Rich, Ted Williams and Jim Tabor have proved an answer to any manager's prayer. So the bad and the good are intermixed like chocolate and vanilla batter in Joe's marble cake.

Call to Arms

EVERY MAJOR LEAGUE MANAGER HAS two [illegible] (1) to keep 25 men satisfied and prevent the breaking down of the team's social scheme into little cliques, and (2) the problem of when to switch his pitchers. Perhaps the first item solved itself when Joe Cronin's irritants on the team were dropped down the waste pipe. Still Cronin was heard to mourn recently that Buck Newsom, the old Sox resident, couldn't have been less emotional and a bit more effective before he went away.

Well one can't keep his cake and eat it too! For Newsom went to St. Louis last year in a trade for Joe Vosmik and Vosmik was generally credited by Cronin as being the chief instrument in the Red Sox coup on the Yankees. Cronin thinks that the example of the Vosmik company spirit demonstrated by the Cleveland Polo Grounds has been knocked off the latest powder in the Red Sox ammunition dump. Perhaps it may have awakened them to a sense of shame for wasting time at golf and taking Tom's money in return for their shoddy play.

Pretty much of what happens to the Red Sox next October is the story of what happens to the Yankees at the hands of the other American League clubs. For if the rival managers maintain the previous defeatist policy and pitch their second-string pitchers in the hope of that the Yanks, as heretofore, the Red Sox will continue to take New York apart. But if, following the Sox demonstration that the Yankees are made of the same bleached bones and pinch-hit ball players, the other teams burn their last powder in an honest chance to resurrect baseball interest from its [illegible] and win the pennant which has cost [illegible] fans twenty years of acid stomach.

CRAMER SINGLES FOR A. L. IN FIRST

By JOE CASHMAN

NEW YORK, July 11—Baseball's seventh annual July jubilee was staged here this afternoon with the All-Stars of the American and National Leagues squaring off for charity before a crowd of some 65,000.

More charitable than the players was the weather. The crowd exceeded expectations by some 15,000 and this was attributed almost entirely to the day.

Bright, clear and cool it was, it marked contrast to the terrific heat wave of the past week.

Victors in four of the last six "Dream Games," though beaten in two of the last three, Joe McCarthy's American Leaguers entered the fray 2 to 1 favorites over Gabby Hartnett's Nationals.

The experts figured that the wear the junior leaguers had the pitching edge, which always in the past was conceded to the other side while still maintaining their traditional offensive advantage.

GREENBERG ON FIRST

The only other starter not a Yank was Hank Greenberg of the Tigers, playing first base. The world's champions starting, in addition to Ruffing, was Bill Dickey back of the bat, Joe Gordon at second, Red Rolfe at third, Joe DiMaggio in center and George Selkirk in left.

Red was the predominating color in the National League lineup with five of Bill McKechnies pace setting Cincinnati chargers in there. Ernie Lombardi received Derringer with Frank McCormick at first, Lonnie Frey at second and Ival Goodman in right field.

Arky Vaughan of the Pirates at short, Stan Hack of the Cubs at third, Mel Ott of the Giants in center and Joe Medwick of the Cards in left completed the cast.

In other words the McCarthy mound selections of Red Ruffing, Tommy Bridges and Bob Feller were rated superior to Ol' Hartnett's choices of Lon Derringer, Bill Lee and Whitlow Wyatt.

FOXX PITCHES

But these experts weren't very positive about it. They re-[illegible] being [illegible] about anything since Red Sox fans threw them [illegible] from the Yanks.

Manager Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx of the Red Sox were in the supporting cast that started Lefty Grove for Connie Mack for the American League.

Neither of the Bees representatives on the squad, Lou Fette and Eddie Miller, received any assurance that he would see action.

James Emory Foxx, Sox home run king and the only other Fox-

PROPHETIC?—Bill Lee, Cubs' pitcher, cools off before resting for today's All-Star game in Yankee Stadium. Was this scene to be prophetic, with Lee listed to face the slugging American Leaguers during today's game?

Old-Timers Gather in Hub For Fenway Tilt

There was a genuine gathering of the baseball clans today. From all points they trekked into the Hub.

These mighty men of other days tomorrow will give brief exhibitions of the prowess which enabled them to bring championships to Boston and other cities which they represented.

And Fenway Park is the place that the Veterans of Foreign Wars picked as their site for the revival of old memories. It was there that several championships were won, and several of the boys who were crowned diamond kings will resume their old stations.

Joe Wood, former Red Sox ace, will be back on the mound, and Walter Johnson, also fit, will be with him, and most of the old infield, McInnis, Janvrin, Wagner and Gardner will be here to block the drives of the National Leaguers, while the Speaker-Lewis-Hooper combination is intact.

Of course there will be several shifts, for Johnny Lane is determined the combinations of other days shall be kept together.

This means that Walter Johnson will have for his partner, the old reliable Jack Slattery, and Shano Collins will take a crack at the first corner.

Charlie Ruffing will start off pitching to Jack Ryan, and there is a possibility that they will operate for an inning under the old rules.

FIRST ON SCENE—Harry Hooper, great Red Sox right fielder of past, here for Old Timers game tomorrow at Fenway Park. Old Timers are making their headquarters at the Statler.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

JOHNNY NOONAN, executive City Editor of this newspaper and one of the greatest reporters this city has ever known, is back on the firing line today following a vacation with Mrs. Noonan which took them to California.

"Hollywood is Boston," said the news hound. "We dropped into Ruby Foo's at the Vendome in Hollywood, and met Eddie Lewis. Eddie picked up the telephone and invited a group well known in Boston to sit in with us over our chicken and noodles. The party included Tommy Farmer and his wife, Margie, Tony Palazola and his bride, Johnny Indrisano and Eddie Mead, manager of Hammering Henry Armstrong.

"Farmer used to conduct bowling alleys in old Castle Square in the South End. He now has alleys in Hollywood, while he also trains boxers.

"While with Tommy, we met Donald Meek who is in the movies as a comedian. Remember Donald when he took comedy parts in John Craig's stock company at the old Castle Square Theater. Meek and Farmer have taken old Castle Square to Hollywood.

"Eddie Lewis had cafes in Boston. Tony Palazola used to conduct a news stand in Boston, and later managed Paul Doyle and other boxers out of this city. He is now staging the boxing shows in San Francisco, and is doing very well. Only recently Tony got married. His bride looks like a movie star.

"We later dropped in at the American Legion Bowl in Hollywood to see a boxing show. The bouts were fast, and featured many Filipino boxers. One of these youngsters may develop into another Pancho Villa.

"Lieut. Tom Kennedy referees the bouts in Hollywood, and is the greatest referee I have ever seen. At the end of every round he points to the corner of the boxer leading at that stage of the contest.

"The feature bout was a rough affair. Kennedy warned one boxer five times, and told him he would throw him out of the ring if he committed another foul. When the boxer once more violated the rules, Kennedy tossed him out of the ring.

"As Kennedy started for the dressing room, one of the seconds of the disqualified boxer followed him, making threats. Kennedy whirled around suddenly and chased the second right back into the ring, then picked up the 'mike' of the public address system and told the fans the reason for his decision. Kennedy was greeted with cheers."

EDDIE LEWIS told Noonan an interesting story about his dog. The dog, says Eddie, [illegible] and has made a specialty of collecting the neighbors' [illegible]. Conditions became so serious Mrs. Lewis inserted the following advertisement in the newspapers:

"Butch, a great Dane dog owned by Mrs. Eddie Lewis, is not responsible for his actions. If you miss milk and newspapers from your back porch, call Mrs. Lewis on the telephone and she will replace them."

Noonan said Eddie [illegible] to buy some [illegible] with [illegible].

While on the Coast Noonan met Lieut. Billy Cox, who [illegible] Police Commissioner Lunding's Junior police.

"It is wonderful," he replied. "The splendor and lighting of the Fair are beyond words. The only persons who don't get wildly enthusiastic about the Fair are the natives.

"I dropped in at Joe DiMaggio's cafe in San Francisco. It is a high class place, and has been doing a swell business.

"I saw Charley Howard's ranch where Seabiscuit is trying to get ready for the races again.

"On the way to the Coast, we went through Canada and stopped off at Jasper Park in Alberta. This is where the King and Queen visited. We visited the eight room finished log cabin occupied by royalty. The Noonans touched the pillow on which rested the head of the queen, while a Boston City Editor for a time occupied the queen's chair. The boys in the press room at Police Headquarters would have got a laugh out of this one."

Somebody called Noonan on the telephone [illegible] and he [illegible] for a meeting of City Editors [illegible] noted together [illegible] first.

Cheers for Cronin

I believe Joe Cronin is responsible more than anybody else for the smashing success of the Red Sox. Cronin didn't lose heart even when the team was in a slump. He kept driving for the Leaders and I feel he will reach them.

Dempsey Realized Million Dollars For Four Fights

By JACK DEMPSEY
(As told to W. B. Seabrook)
(Copyright 1939 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I got $50,000 for fightingg Billy Miske at Benton Harbor, Michigan. The Carpentier fight in Jersey City was a world-beating knockout for Tex Rickard. The gate receipts were around $1,600,000, and our share was $300,000.

We got $270,000 for fighting Tom Gibbons out in Shelby—and we dragged down $175,000—nearly half a million—for the Firpo fight in New York.

Considering the time, I guess that's the biggest money anybody ever got or ever will get for ring fighting. Less than four minutes' fighting. That's over $100,000 a minute, isn't it?

Then there was $100,000 for fighting Bill Brennan. I forgot that.

If you count those six fights up, you will find that we grossed over $1,000,000. Split fifty-fifty, and that's a half million for Doc Kearns and a half million for me.

But the net would figure a lot less. I was telling you the truth the other day when I said I thought we had made more money outside the ring than in it.

EXPENSES ARE HIGH

Expenses are a lot more than anybody thinks. A training camp eats up the money. You have to carry a big crew.

Down in Atlantic City, training for the Carpentier fight, we spent more than $100,000 and that was over and above what we took in charging admission for the workouts.

Where did the rest come from? Well, a big item is the moving pictures. My pictures are due to gross more than a million and a half, and we get 60 per cent of it. And there's the vaudeville. Five and ten thousand dollars a week is big pocket money, believe me.

But even outside of all that, we've made money. Kearns is a good business man, and he has taught me a lot about business.

You want to know what we've done with it. Well, we've got most of it salted down pretty solid. I won't be champion always. And when my time comes to take the count I want to be something afterward beside an "ex."

TWO COAL BARONS

A couple of years ago we were looking around for investments and we happened on a property at Holper, Utah. You know I once worked in the mines, with a pick and shovel to the ground and I thought it would give me a great kick to own one.

So we bought it and set it going. We call it the Western Coal Company though it be fair with you, it's not very great, just a good little mine.

And we hunt fourteen miles of railroad spur and get out some letterheads that said "William Harrison Dempsey, president, and John Kearns, secretary and treasurer."

The first thing I did on those letterheads was to sit down and write my mother a letter. I knew she would be proud and I remembered how she had wanted me to stick at work and stay out of the fight game and I thought she was to be—[illegible] the kid did it.

I'd stayed in the bottom of one of these mines like a good boy digging out coal how long do you think it would have taken me to own one?"

And what do you think she wrote back? She said: "I'm sure my boy would have succeeded at anything." It wouldn't surprise her if I ran for President and got elected.

You know, my mother for a long time was dead set against my going into the fight game. She used to cry about it and tell me she was ashamed and try to make me quit.

ALMOST QUIT

And she almost did. She was crazy about former President Roosevelt, and one day somebody told her he believed in boxing—that he was good at it himself and advised all boys to go in for it.

They told her he had fitted up a gymnasium at the White House with a ring in it, and even had professional boxers and trainers to come and teach him and his boys to hook and jab and uppercut.

I think that must have sort of persuaded her—though she would not admit it but not long afterward, she said one night after supper, when I was talking about going east.

Well, William Harrison, if you must be a boxer, go ahead and be the best one you can, and maybe some day I'll live to be proud of you after all.

I tell you, it's great to think that she is proud of me now, and that I can do things for her and give her servants and everything else she needs to help make her happy. Wherever I go I get a letter from her every week, and it's one letter I always answer.

You asked me about money and what I got out of it. Well, that's the biggest thing, by a long shot.

Imagine a champion heavyweight who gets "weepy" on one cocktail, sick on one cigarette, and who therefore lets them alone. The next chapter will tell more of Jack Dempsey's intimate personal habits, with even more intimate comments of his own about his way of living, in the Evening American tomorrow.

Alice Marble Plans Career in Movies

HOLLYWOOD, July 11 (AP)—Alice Marble, who plays tennis well enough to win Wimbledon's historic cup, and who sings well enough to win praise from New York's night clubbers, soon will try a movie career.

Frank Orsatti, Hollywood agent, said he had signed a contract for her, but that it forbids any role as a tennis player. Her acting will not interfere with her amateur status as a tennis player, he added.

135 Players After Wright's Golf Crown

TEDESCO COUNTRY CLUB July 11 "There are 135 players here today playing the first round of the qualifications in the 35th Massachusetts amateur championship battling to be among the low 32 at the conclusion of tomorrow's second round stroke competition test.

Fred J. Wright, Jr., Trapelo, who went through to his seventh state amateur title a year ago at the Essex County Club, is not defending. He announced a year ago that he was through with championship golf. He was the state junior champion in 1915 and 1916, amateur titleholder in 1920, 1926, 1928 through 1931 and in 1936.

He was the New England Public Links champion in 1927, runner up in the Mass. opens of 1926 and 1930 and also a member of the United States Walker Cup team, which played at St. Andrews, Scotland, in 1923.

FRED WRIGHT OUT

With Wright out, the battle for the title is wide open. Emory P. Stratton, Woodland, on past performances, is entitled to be the favorite to succeed the "Master." Stratton was the unsuccessful finalist at Belmont in 1929 and again last year.

Francis "Ancy" Doyle and Carl Nettelbladt have Worcester all hot and bothered over their chances of bringing the state crown back to the Heart of the Commonwealth, which hasn't been able to boast of the champion since 1913 when Helen Schmidt defeated Francis Quimet in the finals at Brae Burn, a victory which was tainted because of a penalty shot called against Quimet on the 18th hole for taking a practise swing within a club's length of his ball.

KNOWLES REAL THREAT

Doyle and Nettelbladt are great golfers. But, their records clearly show that they are better medal than match players. For some reason, they carry medal play complexes into all match play events and as a result they have never threatened to lift the state amateur title.

Bobby Knowles, The Country Club, is a real threat. He has been playing exceptionally well this season and there isn't a better competitor in the field than the Brookline representative.

EYES OLYMPICS—Lorraine Fischer of the W. S. A. of New York, former national junior 220-yard freestyle champion, is campaigning with an eye to the 1940 Olympics. She competes at Canobie Lake in the 100 freestyle, as another step in her drive, on Friday.

Rena Carson, who will seek the national junior 220 yard free style championship, heads the list of Boston Swimming Association's entries for the club's eighth annual meet at the Canobie Lake Pool, Salem, N. H., Friday night. Eleven other B. S. A. girls are also entered, with Patience Hosmer a candidate for the N. E. senior 440 yard free style crown.

Elinor Kyle and Mary Hartnett will seek honors in the 100 free style scratch. Helen Carroll, Nancy Lane, Jean McCarty, Celia Jurgelitvich, Shirley and Phyllis Porter in the Class B 100, while Patricia Grojean and Margaret Kennedy will compete in the 100 breast stroke scratch.

SPORT INTERLUDES

Shore Mystery Of Hockey Loop | Where Will Eddie Fit on Road?

—By BILL GRIMES

Eddie Shore is not only the greatest but the only box office attraction left in the National Hockey League . . . More than any other player, Shore is responsible for the tremendous crowds that turn out to see the Bruins play at the Boston Garden . . . Roy Conacher, Mel Hill, Bill Cowley and the Kraut line have their followers but it's Eddie Shore who appeals to the masses.

According to an announcement released today by the Bruins, Eddie Shore has been signed for next season, after which he will be declared a free agent . . . BUT, Shore's contract with the Bruins specifies that he will be called upon to play ONLY home games . . .

What will Eddie Shore do while the Bruins are on the road?

And, what will the other National Hockey League club magnates say when they learn that Shore will NOT play in their rinks next season?

Bill Cowley

There's something very "fishy" about the Bruins-Shore-Springfield controversy. And, Shore's signing to play only home games doesn't clear up the situation, particularly in view of the fact that he's supposedly the owner of the Springfield Indians.

But, it's too hot to think about, let alone talk hockey, so let's skip it, until such a time as we're in a position to get the right low down on the entire transaction, and what has actually transpired since Jim Norris shifted his alliances to Indianapolis.

For years, the impression has been more or lese general that the rules of golf are almost completely disregarded during public links championships.

RULES OBSERVED

With that thought in mind, I cruised around the George Wright Golf Club yesterday looking for infringements of the rules. With the exception of one player, who lifted out of a brook and dropped his ball back of the hazard and then, because he apparently didn't like the lie, took another drop, I didn't see one rule broken.

Joe Batiste, Tucson, Ariz., high school's one man track team, has been selected as a member of the United States All Star team which will tour Eprope this summer . . . Freddie Wright will play in the Rockport Country Club M. G. A. open one week from Saturday . . . Jack Daly, the former English high school all-scholastic tackle, who captained the freshmen eleven at Williams, last Fall, and Tommy Mulroy, who played half back for the Amherst yearlings, are first cousins.

Ty Andersen, the Lynn boy, who has been playing with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, is at home . . . He plans to remain in these parts next winter and hopes to play with the Walter Brown's Boston Olympics . . . Ty is one of the best defense men in amateur hockey and he would be a welcomed addition to the O's.

HILL COMES THROUGH

Ralph Clifford the former golf writer, is going to pull a Jim Reidy during the Winchester Father and Son tournament . . . He will play with four sons, Ralph, Jr., Arthur, Dick and Jim.

Playing 72 holes in two days at Winchester is a tough assignment even for a "boy from home" . . . Fred Hill, the New England Public Links champion, passed up the state amateur in order to play in the National Public Links classic at Baltimore . . .

It has been erroneously reported that the Northeastern Four Ball Metropolitan Style championship, which will be played at Poland Spring, Me., July 23 and 24, is limited to professionals who are members of the P. G. A. . . .

DOUTY IN ACTION

Any professional is eligible to play in the Northeasterns, which is a brain child of Johnny Corcoran's and sponsored by the Poland Spring House . . . Walter Cosgrove, pro at Green Hill, will have Gerry Anderson, Jack Nugent and Hugh Corsini as his partners at Poland Spring . . .

While Les Douty, a former Hearst New England champion, who, incidentally is a pro but NOT a member of the N. E. P. G. A., will play with Stan Day, Tim O'Connell and Jack Bradshaw . . . Fred Hill, who won the New England Public Links title for the third consecutive year at the George Wright Golf Club, is known as "Jada" in Worcester . . .

Although he caddied at the Worcester Country Club for many years, "Jada" Hill didn't take up golf until about five years ago . . . He was a ball player and didn't cotton to the links pastime . . . Gerry Anderson, the former state caddy and junior champion from Worcester, is back in the sports writing racket . . .

Charley Round Wins Golf Medal

PROVIDENCE, July 11 (AP)—Charley Round, Harvard medical school student and former Brown golf captain, was medalist in the qualifying round of the Rhode Island amateur golf championship with 70-73—143 over the Metacomet club course.

Don Gill of Newport was runner-up at 78-72—150 while Buddy Patterson of Annaquatucket, state junior champion, was third, 78-74—152.

Hackney Wins Purse In Maine Tourney

RANGELEY, Me., July 11 (AP)—Stocky Dave Hackney, veteran Lowell, Mass., golf pro, took top money today in the $800 Rangeley Open with a 54-hole total of 209, one above the combined par for the three courses over which the state's richest tourney was played.

PLAYER-MANAGER ROLE FOR SHORE

President Weston Adams and Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins announced today that they had concluded a mutually satisfactory arrangement with Eddie Shore, that the all-star defense player had signed a contract to play hockey for the Bruins next winter, and that he would be declared a free agent on or before May 1, 1940.

The major points in the arrangements between the Bruins and Eddie Shore are:

1—Eddie Shore will be available to play in all home games of the Bruins next season, and in all play-off games both at home and away.

2—Shore will be declared a free agent on or before May 1, 1940.

3—After that date, Shore will be free to play for the International American League, Springfield Club, of which he is to be the sole owner, but he may not play for any other major or minor league clubs without the consent of the Bruins.

Thus comes to an end the problem set up when the Bruins' star defense player decided to be a hockey club owner.

ROSS SATISFIED

Speaking for the Bruins, Manager Art Ross said that he and Weston Adams thought the arrangement would prove most satisfactory to the Boston club, hockey, the Boston fans, and of course, Eddie Shore, himself.

Ross said that he had been able to help Shore with the planning of his organization in Springfield, and would continue to give any assistance possible.

Eddie Shore, voicing his pleasure at the arrangement which would permit him to play only the home games for the Bruins, and his satisfaction at the way things had been worked out by Weston Adams and Art Ross, said that he would go to Edmonton in another week.

He will return to Boston later in the summer and will live here until after the next hockey season, when he plans to move to Springfield.

Shore was in Springfield today looking over the plant which he has bought outright. He will attend the meeting of the International League magnates tomorrow in New York and will return to Boston for a short spell before taking off for Edmonton.

Star of Sea Seeks 2d Victory Over Roslindale

East Boston's Star of the Sea Club returns from the road and is home tonight at American Legion Park to the Roslindale Town Club, leaders of the East division of the Park League whom the Stars upset last night with Bob Lavoie doing the chucking.

Tonight, Bob Hess may be assigned to hand the leaders their second consecutive setback and Lou Strecker himself may take the hill against the hosts with Healy second choice.

Dick Casey Club, the other divisional leader, was also tipped last night by St. Augustine's with Joe Walsh stymying the Caseys with one hit and blanking the Caseys 4-0. Tonight Casey Club goes to Barry Field in Charlestown where the St. Catherine's Club will provide the opposition and Joe Goobey will toss for the Saints.

Ray Coolidge's South Boston Town Club lost a close one last night to Holy Name at City Point and tonight Ray takes his club to Rogers Park in Brighton where the Murphy Club awaits them with either Paul Green or Tony Sarauskey.

Roslindale fans will be provided with a natural at Fallon Field when Bill Bailey's Holy Namers will hold forth with the neighboring St. Alphonsus forces from Mission Hill as guests. The Namers drove into second place in the West group last week passing Star of the Sea and the Murphy Club and after last night's win at South Boston have a three-game lead over the third place occupants.

CHUBASCO LEADS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11 (AP)—Sailing at a steady clip, which saw it log 114 miles in its last 24-hour computation, the Chubasco, owned by Bill Stewart, Jr., of Los Angeles, continued to maintain its lead in the San Francisco-Hawaii race.

Stage Set For Opening Of Rockingham

SALEM, N. H., July 12—With the stake nominations all closed, the condition book issued, and the $250,000 grandstand all but completed, Rockingham Park is ready for its 18-day Summer meeting, which will start here a week from Monday and end on the 12th of August with the seventh running of the traditional Rockingham Park Handicap.

The stake nominations, heavier than usual, are now being tabulated by the office force, and should be announced within 24 hours. It is known, however, that such nationally famous establishments as Riddle Farms, William F. Woodward's Belair Stud, Ogden Phipps' Wheatley Stable, George D. Widener and W. E. Boeing, all among the 30 leading stables of last year, will be represented in the feature races of the meeting.

Close to 500 horses are already stabled here, awaiting the word of Starter Bob Fregd. They include five stake horses owned by Sam Riddle, the owner of War Admiral, as well as dozens of thoroughbreds which, in recent weeks, have been vanned to Suffolk Downs to score convincing victories.

Racing Secretary John P. Turner, who is now serving in the same capacity at Delaware Park, is expected to arrive here next Tuesday to take personal charge of the last-minute details.

King, Eng Meet In Match Race

Medford midget auto race authorities will contact Bob King, New England's leading race driver tonight to determine whether he will consent to a special match race with Ed Eng at Medford Thursday night.

Yesterday, Eng, tired of the praise that has been centered around King, challenged the Waltham driver to a special one-mile speed race.

In the hopes that King will accept, Eng is riding a borrowed car at present in order to have his own special car ready and fit for the big race.

Refuse to Let Connie Listen to Broadcast

PHILADELPHIA, July 11 (AP)—Connie Mack, picked to lead the American Leaguers in today's dream game at New York but kept out by illness, will have to wait until someone tells him the score.

Connie wanted to listen in by radio today, but the man who is "managing" the manager just now is keeping him on his back. The doctor said he was not going to run any risks.

Mrs. Mack said orders are to keep him as quiet as possible. He is not to be excited.

If the Americans get "into a hole" and the master baseball strategist should be listening in, he would be sure to "call" in his mind the next move. And if it isn't done, it might fuss him.

$50,000 Race Draws Field Of 17 Stars

year-old colt, and my choice to win tomorrow, and that of his stable mate, Aethelwold.

The final entries were made by Mary Hirsch shortly before ten o'clock. She brought in Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving, and King Ranch's brown three-year-old filly Ciencia.

Arrival of Ciencia at Suffolk Downs this morning was a surprise. It was a coincidence that she still kept the field at 17 when the other little lady of the field, Court Dance, Mrs. Emil Denemark's four-year-old chestnut filly, was not entered with her stablemates, War Minstrel and Blind Eagle.

CIENCIA LATE ARRIVAL

Ciencia arrived by train this morning and was followed on the grounds by Fighting Fox. The latter was vanned over from Empire in the cool of the morning hours. Fighting Fox arrived later. Burning Star, Shandon Farm's chestnut five-year-old, was due from Chicago this afternoon.

The entries closed at 10:30 and shortly after that the draw for post positions was made. Charles J. McLennan and members of his staff; Tom Thorp, representing the stewards, and John T. Lambert, executive vice-president of Suffolk Downs, looked on as the draw was made for post positions. It turned out to be a very favorable draw.

Four of the fastest horses in the field drew post positions within the first five. Pompoon, Jerome Louchheim's star, drew No. 1. Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Pagliacci drew the two position, Ligaroti four and Fighting Fox five. Burning Star drew three.

Honey Cloud, one of the speed horses of the field, drew No. 14, and favorite Challedon drew 12. In Challedon's case this meant nothing, because the three-year-old colt is a slow breaker.

3 OUTSIDE GATE

Following the close of entries, it was announced that if all 17 horses start that three will be placed outside the gate, namely, Clodion, which drew 15th position; Masked General, 16th, and Heelfly, 17th.

It is significant that two of the outside horses, Clodion and Heelfly, are bad post actors, and this will be an aid to Starter Bob Frend and the large field.

There were several additions to the jockeys. M. Peters will ride Masked General, George Seabo will be up on Nedayr and Eddie Arcaro will ride Lucky Omen. Nick Wall has been named to ride Ciencia and C. Stevenson will be on Aethelwold.

CHAMP AND PAL—Challedon, Dave Wilson's choice to take the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk tomorrow, looks out of his stall as he rests for the big test. His stable pal, a shaggy terrier, stays on guard. Challedon faces capable racers, including Bing Crosby's Ligaroti, in the big "Cap".

MACK THE WINNER

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP)—Irish Johnny Mack, 136¾, of New Britain, Ct., pounded out an easy eight-round victory over Jimmy Vaughn, 136½, of Cleveland, at Coney Island Velodrome.
